FRANCES WILLIAMS

SEEKS DIVORCE TO WED STAR

CHICAGO, April 1.—(INS.)—The approaching marriage of Frances Williams, blonde star of George White's "Scandals," loomed closer today with the filing of a suit for divorce by Allan R. Jones. Miss Williams' fiance.

Jones, the taxicab driver who pounded his way to fame on a piano keyboard, now leader of the orchestra in the show, "Fifty Million Frenchmen," filed suit for divorce here yesterday.

Mrs. Jones, on hearing of her husband's engagement to Miss Williams, recently filed suit in Pittsburgh against the actress for $100,000, charging alienation of affections.

Miss Williams announced she will wed Jones "two minutes after he obtains his divorce."

Booth Tarkington In Eye Hospital

BALTIMORE, Md., April 1.—(AP.)—Booth Tarkington, noted novelist, today entered the Wilmer Eye Institute of Johns Hopkins Hospital for a renewal of treatments begun more than a year ago to save his sight. Mr. Tarkington had been a patient at the institution last year and in March, 1929, an operation was performed which Dr. William H. Wilmer called a remarkable success and after which he held out hope that the sight of the author's right eye would be completely restored.

IRENE BITTER AT DAGUE'S CONVICTION

Doomed Pair, Resting Hopes On Pleas, Sing in Cells To Bolster Each Other

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., April 1.—Doomed to death in the electric chair for his part in the murder of Corp. Brady Paul, Walter Glenn Dague and his partner in crime, Irene Shroeder, also condemned for the same killing, sang to each other through the corridors of the jail after Dague's return from the courtroom.

The singing followed Irene's first bitterness over Dague's death penalty. When told of the jury's verdict, she exclaimed through the bars of her cell:

"Why did they give him death? Wasn't it enough to give it to me?"

HOPE IN INTERVENTION

But when she heard Dague's song she sang her response.

They sang of hope, love and salvation. They sang in reckless abandon. They sang to each other.

Theirs were songs of bolstered hope—hope in the belief that some power higher than the courts and juries of Lawrence County would intervene in their behalf before that fatal day when the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania would exact in full measure for the untimely death of one of its uniformed servants.

NEW TRIAL ASKED

The first move in behalf of Dague was made this morning by his attorneys, Thomas W. Dickey and Benjamin Jarrett, when they filed a motion for a new trial. They cited 14 exceptions to the

GRUNDY LINK TO PINCHOT URGED

Dry Support, Anti-Utilities Stand of Both Recalls Similarity to 1922 Drive

HARRISBURG, April 1.—(AP.)—A titanic struggle was on in Pennsylvania today for Republican nomination to the two highest public offices of the state, United States Senator and Governor, which will carry with it control of the party that has administered the commonwealth for the last 35 years.

With such prominent figures as Senator Joseph R. Grundy, secretary of Labor James J. Davis, a member of the cabinets of three presidents, and former Gov. Gifford Pinchot directly involved as candidates and Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and William S. Vare interested as directing counsellors of one faction, the internecine contest which will come to a head on primary election day, May 20, is certain to attract national attention.

1922 DRIVE RECALLED

The bitter and memorable primary fight of 1926 still fresh in their minds, Pennsylvanians looked even further back, to the 1922 primary and asked themselves the question:

"Will history repeat itself?"

In that primary contest, Grundy, then head of the powerful Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, disgruntled over the slating of George E. Alter for Governor by the state Republican organization, then controlled by the late Gov. William C. Sproul and W. Harry Baker, went so far

BRING THEM HOME!

TO HON. HERBERT HOOVER, President of the United States:

The country is disappointed to learn authoritatively that you, Mr. President, support Stimson in his about-face, his decision that AFTER ALL the United States WILL SIGN A "CONSULTATIVE PACT."

That means: An agreement for the United States to sit down with European powers and Japan, whenever war threatens over there, to confer on WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT.

All last week, sir, the newspaper correspondents at Washington and, through them, the American public, were allowed to understand that the President was OPPOSED to this transparent substitute for the League of Nations.

Your Armistice Day speech, your opening address to Congress, your purported instructions to the American delegation to the naval conference, all conspired to make many people think that you were AT LAST a convert to the American doctrine of America keeping out of Europe and minding our own business.

Yet this, your latest turn-about, should not surprise those who know your record, sir. It is a record singular in American political history, a picture of a man setting and resetting sails to catch the ever-shifting winds of political expediency: A man turning from internationalist into a Democrat.

Let us courteously consider your league record, Mr. President, and determine its bearing on your advice that we now join a puny league of militaristic European nations in a "consultative pact."

The country knows that, at the end of 1919, AS A DEMOCRAT, you were campaigning for our UNCONDITIONAL ENTRANCE INTO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

At that time, you said YOU DID NOT THINK WE NEEDED TO MAKE ANY "RESERVATIONS."

Speaking as a good Democrat, you wanted the Senate to accept the Covenant of the League of Nations WITHOUT DOTTING AN "I" OR CROSSING A "T," just as President Wilson demanded.

But ten years later, AS A REPUBLICAN you recognized the League of Nations as an organization OF FORCE, WITH WHICH THE UNITED STATES MUST HAVE NOTHING TO DO.

In your Armistice Day speech, just last November 11, you said, regarding world peace:

"There are today two roads to that end. The European nations have, by the Covenant of the League of Nations, agreed that if nations fail to settle their differences peaceably THEN FORCE SHOULD BE APPLIED BY OTHER NATIONS TO COMPEL THEM TO BE REASONABLE.

"WE HAVE REFUSED TO TRAVEL THAT ROAD. We are confident that at least in the Western Hemisphere PUBLIC OPINION will suffice to check violence.

"THIS IS THE ROAD WE PROPOSE TO TRAVEL."

When you said those splendid words, what a long way you had come from your views of 1919. In October of that year, speaking as a Democrat, in a public address you told the students of Stanford University that the Senate should ratify the League Covenant exactly as Mr. Wilson presented it to them. You said:

"I AM CONFIDENT THAT IF WE NOW ATTEMPT TO REVISE THE TREATY WE SHALL TREAD A ROAD THROUGH EUROPEAN CHAOS. EVEN IF WE MANAGED TO KEEP OUR SOLDIERS OUT OF IT, WE WILL NOT ESCAPE FEARFUL ECONOMIC LOSSES."

Well, Mr. President, that sounds like President Wilson's words: "Join the League or it will break the heart of the world."

The country rejected your advice. We did NOT join. The world's heart has gone on beating. Our soldiers have managed to "keep out of it." And we escaped "fearful economic losses" UNTIL THE FIRST YEAR OF YOUR PRESIDENCY.

TEN YEARS AGO you were for the League as a harmless and necessary PEACE parliament.

LATER you recognized that the League is an international instrument of FORCE.

Turn back the pages of time and read what you said to the students at Palo Alto on October 2, 1919:

"WE HEAR THE CRY THAT THE LEAGUE OBLIGATES THAT OUR SONS BE SENT TO FIGHT IN FOREIGN LANDS. YET THE VERY INTENT AND STRUCTURE OF THE LEAGUE IS TO PREVENT WAR. WE FOUGHT THE ATTEMPT TO IMPOSE AUTOCRACY ON THE WORLD. WE WON. ARE WE TO REFUSE OUR COUNSELS TO THESE PEOPLES NOW STRUGGLING TO REALIZE OUR OWN IDEALS?

"TO ME EVERY LINE OF THE COVENANT IS THE COMPLETE NEGATION OF MILITARISM."

That was spoken as a Democrat. Ten years later as a Republican you say that the way of the League is the way of FORCE.

Mr. President, you should not be surprised if the Senate and the country did not take your advice to enter this NEW European political-military alliance politely termed a "consultative pact."

The country has a right to be doubtful of the wisdom of your advice on international policy or the permanence of your attitude on any political or national or international question.

As a matter of fact, Mr. President, if we face the situation HONESTLY, can you or any of us escape the cold logic of Senator Johnson's conclusion about this "consultative pact," when he says:

"If we agree to meet with the nations of Europe concerning differences in the Mediterranean or among the countries there, it follows conclusively that WE CANNOT MEET AND THEN RUN, BUT WE WILL MEET AND DECIDE AND, WHETHER WE LIKE IT OR NOT, THEN ACT."

TO ACT, Mr. President. Isn't that what they WANT us in this consultative pact for, and isn't it the ONLY thing they want us for?

Have you gone back to your original Democratic opinion about the desirability of the United States joining some European league or compact?

If so, how can you expect the American people who have so often and so overwhelmingly rejected the policy of European entanglements to support you in your wavering and varying attitudes?

Mr. President, for your own sake and for the sake of this nation,

BRING THE AMERICAN DELEGATION HOME.

POLICE SEIZE EX-DRIVER IN CHASE

Downtown Pedestrians Flee, Mounted Patrolman Hurt Pursuing Attacking Gang

Disorder broke out anew in the taxi strike today when a brick was hurled at a cab at Fifth avenue and Grant street.

For a time wild excitement prevailed. Pedestrians scurried to cover and a policeman was reported to have fired a shot while pursuing three men suspected of having started the disorder.

During the chase Mounted Patrolman Dan Doyle fell from his horse when the animal slipped, and was hurt. He caught Joe DeRocco, 26, of 1614 Edna street, who was taken to Central Police Station on a suspicious person charge.

Patrolman Doyle was taken to Mercy Hospital suffering an injury to the knee.

THIRD TIME ARRESTED

It is the third time DeRocco, former cab driver, has been arrested since the start of the strike, and he is now awaiting sentence for contempt of court for interfering with the operation of cabs in defiance of a court injunction. He will have a hearing tomorrow.

The disorder today marked the first outbreak since the resumption of taxi service about two weeks ago. Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh announced that extra police guards would be kept in the downtown district until the strike has ended.

NEW PARLEY PLANNED

There is a possibility that Mayor Charles H. Kline may meet with taxicab company officials today to discuss the strike situation. The officials and their attorneys said

RIVER'S VICTIM NURSE HERE

Mrs. Kennedy disappeared five weeks ago.

Her body was seen floating in the Hudson River last Friday.

Examination showed bruises on the forehead. Cause of death has not been determined.

The clue which led to the identification was the shoes Mrs. Kennedy was wearing.

Coolidge Buys Tree-Clad Estate, 16-Room Home

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., April 1.—(INS.)—Ex-President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge announced today that they had purchased "The Beeches," a handsome tree-surrounded estate on an elevation at the edge of the Northampton meadows, with an unobstructed view of the Mount Tom and Mount Holyoke ranges.

Their 16-room home will be in market contrast with the modest nine-room half of a duplex house on Massasoit street, which has been "home" to them nearly 25 years.

In announcing the purchase of "The Beeches," rated by assessors at $40,000 or more, the former President said it would afford Mrs. Coolidge and himself more personal privacy, with better opportunity for entertaining guests, and will allow more freedom for the Coolidge pet dogs.

Mr. Coolidge described it as "a modest place with a little land," although "The Beeches" has nine acres, an outdoor swimming pool, tennis courts and abundant flower gardens. The house contains four baths, an elevator and telephone connections on each floor.

"The Beeches" was purchased from Mrs. Elsa P. Comey. The sale price was not announced.

Mrs. Comey is the widow of the late Maurice Comey, former superintendent of the West Boylston Textile Manufacturing Company. The dwelling house was built by Henry L. McCracken, president of Vassar College, when he was a professor at Smith College.

It was understood the Coolidges would "move in" within a couple of months or as soon as Mrs. Comey found it convenient to vacate.

T REVIVES HOPE FOR TREATY

Three Powers in Accord At Meeting in London; Signing of Pact Forecast

TOKIO, April 1.—(AP.)—The Japanese government today instructed its delegation in London to accept the Reed-Matsudaira naval formula without altering tonnage figures, but with reservations which it was authoritatively stated, should present no difficulties for an early conclusion of a tripartite naval limitation pact.

As a result of its decision, the Tokio government confidently expects the success of the London conference, at least as far as Japan, America and Great Britain are expected.

The government did not make public the instructions but an authoritative source outlined them as follows:

TERMS OF PACT

The tonnage schedules of the Reed-Matsudaira formula are accepted without alteration.

The reservations are set forth under four heads, namely:

First, Japan's acceptance in no wise prejudices her right to reopen the question of tonnage ratio and eight-inch gun cruisers when the present agreement terminates.

Second, Japan reserves the right to arrange her submarine program by replacing vessels before they reach their age limit, but keeping within the limit of 52,700 tons, so as to insure continuous employment of skilled dock yard labor specializing therein.

Third, Japan desires a definite understanding that the agreement is to terminate at the end of 1936.

Fourth, Japan insists that an agreement for extension of the capital ship holiday be bound up in this auxiliary limitation pact.

Progress Made Toward British-French Accord

LONDON, April 1.—(INS.)—Distinct progress toward discovery of a formula "giving the French the security they desire within the existing machinery for the maintenance of peace" was authoritatively reported by a British spokesman today.

The present discussions, it is learned, are based on the French, British, Italian and German memorandum issued at Locarno simultaneously with signing of the Locarno pact.

This memorandum stated that "each member of the League of Nations is bound to co-operate loyally and effectively in support of the covenant and in resistance to any act of aggression which is compatible with its military situation and takes its geopraphical position into account."

The British government has no intention of entering any agreement involving further obligations, military or otherwise, than those set forth in the League of Nations covenant and the Locarno pact, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald told a questioner in the House of Commons today.

Premier MacDonald emphatically denied that the French had urged Britain to go farther than these commitments.

Dry Injunctions Sought in 4 Cases

Judge Robert M. Gibson in Federal Court today granted preliminary injunctions against four places charged with liquor law violations. They are at 68 Washington place, operated by Antonio Salustra; 811 East Ohio street, operated by Peter Greno; a club on the second floor of 1211 Penn avenue, run by Robert Kelly, and an alleged saloon in the rear of 6445 Frankstown avenue, of which J. Roman was named as the proprietor. A hearing on making the injunction permanent will be held June 2.

Man Found in Coma In Front of Home

Lewis Kossman, 56, of 125 Highland avenue, Stowe Township, was found unconscious in front of his home early today. He was taken to South Side Hospital, where it was said his condition was serious. Stowe Township police began investigation in the belief that he had been slugged.

yesterday that they were trying to arrange an interview with Mayor Kline, but it failed to materialize.

There was a rumor being bandied about yesterday that 300 former drivers are ready to start back to work if they can be assured of police protection. The company has expressed its willingness to extend operations if Mayor Kline and Sheriff Robert S. Cain will permit it. That is what will probably be discussed at today's conference, if there is a conference.

DECISION PENDS

Judge Joseph M. Swearingen has not indicated when he will hand down his decision in the temporary injunction asked by the Yellow Cab Company to restrain operation of automobiles for hire by the taxicab drivers' relief committee. Briefs were filed by both sides Friday.

Operation of cabs between the railroad stations and hotels from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., under the terms of Mayor Kline's edict on taxi operations meanwhile are being continued with a heavy police guard on strike duty along the routes. No violence has been reported since these operations started March 18.

FIVE FACE CHARGES

Five members of the Back to Work Committee, arrested in a riot at Moose Temple, March 23, when a vote was scheduled to be taken on returning to work, were turned over by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court today to Constable William Schneider, of the office of Justice of the Peace J. M. O'Rourke, of Brockton.

Constable Schneider informed the magistrate that he had warrants against the five and two other men, sworn out by Chester Waddle, vice chairman of the taxi strikers' organization, of inciting to riot, assault and battery and malicious mischief.

A total of 19 charges have been filed against the seven, he said, and the bail set totals $65,000.

The five turned over are Clyde Hill, 3410 Bates street; Harry Levine, 16 Davenport street; Max Gold, 60 Roberts street; Edward Haney, 11 Tecumseh street; August Rinzo, 2046 Center avenue. The two others are "Midge" Friedman and Morris Fromme, "City." Fromme is chairman of the back-to-work committee.

HURT IN CRASH, SUES MELLON

L. S. Jacobs filed a suit in Common Pleas Court against W. L. Mellon, asking $10,600 damages for injuries to his chest, right shoulder and internal hurts.

He alleges that the driver of the Mellon truck was careless in the handling of the vehicle.

CHICAGO BEER RUNNER SLAIN

CHICAGO, April 1.—(AP.)—Babe Mulaney, beer runner and hoodlum, was shot to death early today in a West Side hotel room. His body had been tossed into a clothes closet and outside the door, down a rear corridor, a gun was found.

Guests notified the night clerk of a shooting on the second floor of the hotel and the door of Mulaney's room was found open. There were signs of a struggle.

Opening the clothes closet, Mulaney's body tumbled onto the floor.

Mulaney was reputedly a beer runner for George (Red) Bolton, notorious West Side gangster. He was about 40 years old.

RASKOB READY TO FACE QUIZ ON LOBBY

Huston Bared as Author of Pamphlet Opposing U. S. Muscle Shoals Operation

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—John J. Raskob, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, will be a witness before the Senate Lobby Committee on Friday.

Roskob sent the committee a telegram today stating he would gladly testify as to his connection with the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

He will be the first witness in the inquiry into the dry law lobbies.

Claudius H. Huston, chairman of the Republican National Committee, last December wrote a pamphlet against government operation of Muscle Shoals, which was circulated by the American Farm Bureau Federation, Chester H. Gray, the legislative of the bureau, told the lobby committee today.

HUSTON AGAIN NAMED

Recalled because of statements he made since he was last on the stand, Gray identified a letter he had written President Thompson, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, in which he said:

"Inclosed please find a pamphlet written by Mr. C. H. Huston, chairman of the Republican National Committee, against government operation of Muscle Shoals. As you know, he is a personal friend of President Hoover, and this is the administration viewpoint on Muscle Shoals, in which Mr. Huston has long been interested as president of the Tennessee River Improvement Association."

The Tennessee River Association was backed by the American Cyanamid Company, which, with the Union Carbide Company, has been seeking Muscle Shoals. The Cyanamid Company has spent $164,000 in lobby fees, and the Carbide Company gave Huston $36,100, which Huston used as stock market margin.

Gray worked in "close harmony," he testified, and sent out propaganda for Huston's organization and the Cyanamid Company in the name of the farm bureaus.

EARLY SHOALS ACTION SEEN

Disposition of the Norris resolution providing for government operation of Muscle Shoals nitrate and power plant by the Senate within two or three days was predicted by Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, as the resolution was laid before the Senate today.

Senator Norris (Rep.), Nebraska, upon this assurance, agreed to defer immediate consideration of the legislation to permit the Senate to dispose of routine business that has piled up during the tariff debate.

GIRL'S CHARGES MEET DENIAL

Louis Boreman, proprietor of two downtown drugstores, today denied the charges of Gladys J. Hastings, who yesterday sued him for $10,000.

Miss Hastings, who lives in Watt Avenue, Ben Avon, contended that Boreman made improper advances to her; that after she had refused these advances he complained that the cash register was "short;" that she was discharged from his service.

Boreman described the charges as "outrageous" and said that Miss Hastings had been dismissed because "her services were not liked."

COUZENS SEEKS MERGERS CURB

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(INS.)—Authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to authorize railway mergers would be suspended pending action on legislation broadening the commission's powers under a joint resolution introduced in the Senate today by Senator Couzens, (Rep.), of Michigan, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Commission.

The measure would specifically halt the pending consolidation of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific systems, which has been approved by the commission.

The resolution cited the inability of the commission to deal with the situation under present laws, and called attention to the need of additional legislation.

WEST BRIDGEWATER, Pa., April 1.—Luke Thomas is being held on charges of the larceny of an automobile and failure to stop after two accidents. It is alleged Thomas stole a car of M. F. GUARD GUSHER AGAINST FIRE

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 1.—(AP.)—Defying man's puny efforts to restrict its towering strength, the Mary Sudik No. 1, wild oil gusher of the Oklahoma City field, today hurled a constant menace of thousands of barrels of oil hundreds of feet into the air.

All suggested precautions were being taken against the possibility of an outbreak of the grim terror of the oil fields—fire. Swept on the wings of a 30-mile gale, petroleum laden spray from what is termed the largest well in the world, yesterday showered over the countryside to the north of the gusher.

Gravity of the situation was relieved somewhat during the night when the wind lessened.

A sudden flash of flame, igniting the oil, would carry disaster and tremendous loss to the citizens of Oklahoma City, who after years of effort finally have proved that an extensive pool of "liquid gold" lies at their door.

The appeal was filed nine days after Doheny was acquitted of giving such a bribe.

Student Gone Over Year Found Driving Taxicab

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 1.—(AP.)—Robert Emmet Boyle, former Fordham University student, who disappeared in December, 1928, was identified as a cab driver here today by a policeman who had seen his photograph published in a newspaper. Boyle admitted his identity.

Confronted by Patrolman Joe Ritchie, Boyle, son of Dr. Patrick Boyle, of Glen Falls, N. Y., readily admitted his identity and talked freely of his wanderings through ... Southern states.

The officer said nothing for a while, but compared his features with the clipping until he felt certain that the driver resembled the picture he held. Then he found that the driver's name was that of the student for whom $500 reward was offered in Glen Falls.

Sailor Rescuing Cat Hurled In Raging Sea—Both Saved

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—(AP.)—Stories of how a ship's officer was swept overboard during a terrific storm because of his determination to save the life of a pet cat were told today by the crew of the El Lobo, as the crippled tanker lay at dock here.

The South American craft was pounded almost to pieces last Tuesday, 200 miles off the coast of Florida, while en route from La Liberta to this city with 50,000 barrels of oil.

During the worst of the storm, a lookout saw Chief Engineer Rudolph Newcastle creeping along the wave washed deck after the ship's mascot. Just then a huge wave struck the tanker.

The craft was buried in foam, and both cat and aspiring rescuer were lost to sight. When the decks rose again to view both were overboard.

Chief Mate Frank Muldowney threw a life-preserver, and the floundering engineer, who had grabbed the cat in his arms, was pulled back on board.

The waves had washed all the El Lobo's lifeboats away, the bridge was smashed and her compass was swept overboard. The wireless was disabled and it was two days before messages could be sent out. The storm left the El Lobo badly crippled, and it took four days to reach Philadelphia.

YANCEY TRIES 8-HOUR FLIGHT TO BERMUDA

International News Service.

COLLEGE POINT, N. Y., April 1.—Capt. Lewis A. Yancey and two companions took off at 9:25 a. m. today for Bermuda in an amphibian plane. They hoped to bring Bermuda within eight hours of New York. William Alexander, veteran pilot, was at the controls. Zen Bouck operated the radio.

The New York Times announced shortly after noon that it had received this message from Capt. Yancey:

"Well on our way and going quickly."

The craft used is a Stinson monoplane, powered with a Wright whirlwind motor. It has been equipped with pontoons.

The difficult part of the flight is the navigation, according to aeronautical experts. Capt. Yancey, was steering. The navigation entails a fight over a 759-mile expanse of sea, which is swept by many cross-wind currents. A tiny island is the goal. Capt. Yancey guided the Bellanca monoplane Pathfinder from Old Orchard, Me., to Rome last summer.

113 CRAFT OPEN AIR 'WAR'

SACRAMENTO, April 1.—(AP.)—Army fliers from all over the country, assembled here for their annual maneuvers, today began a theoretical defense movement against an imaginary enemy advancing upon the cities of the San Francisco Bay area and Central California.

The Army fliers had 113 planes on the defense line, and several others were due to arrive today or tomorrow. Bad weather still held the 22 planes of the First Pursuit Squadron at Cheyenne. The squadron is flying here from Selfridge Field Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Initial operations were confined to reconnaissance flights to familiarize the Army pilots with the terrain.

The maneuvers will continue until April 24.

COSIMA, 92, PASSES IN BAYREUTH

BAYREUTH, Germany, April 1.—(AP.)—Surrounded by her daughters, Frau Cosima Wagner, widow of the noted composer, died quietly today at the age of 92.

Despite her general infirmity and the fact she had been ill for a long time, the death was a surprise to the population of Bayreuth as well as the immediate family. Her only son, Siegfried, could not be summoned from Milan in time to reach the bedside but is expected tonight.

Frau Cosima was the daughter of one of the world's greatest musicians and the widow of two. Her first husband was Hans von Buelow, director of the Weimar Orchestra, whom she married when only 19, and in 1863 she left him for Richard Wagner, whom she married in 1870. She was credited with much of the success of Wagner.

After Wagner's death in 1883 the widow devoted all of her energy to the consecration of his memory by the great Bayreuth festivals.

Frau Cosima's body will be cremated at Coburg, Friday, and an urn containing the ashes will be placed alongside Wagner's tomb at Bayreuth.

Cosima Heroine of One Of World's Great Romances

Associated Press.

The romantic life of Cosima Wagner, daughter of Franz Liszt, the celebrated pianist and composer, was notable for the unusual arrangement whereby she persuaded her first husband, Hans von Bulow, also a famous musician, to grant her a divorce that she might marry Richard Wagner, his best friend.

Von Bulow, desiring her happiness above everything else and also because of the deep regard in which he held Wagner, brought about an annulment of his union with the woman who had borne him two daughters; superintended the plans for her wedding with his rival of the heart, and then remained the couple's best friend until Wagner died, many years later. Wagner also was married, giving up his wife, Minna Planer, for Cosima.

Frau Wagner was born on the shores of Lake Como, about 1839, the daughter of Liszt and the brilliant Comtesse d'Agoult, who had eloped with him from her husband in Paris.

PRESIDED OVER FESTIVALS

Cosima's union with Wagner proved a happy one, and resulted in the birth of three children—two daughters and a son. One of the daughters married the well-known orchestra conducter Beidler, while the other one—named Eva after the heroine of Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin"—remained a spinster and the devoted companion of her mother.

Frau Wagner made her home for many years in a beautiful villa at Santa Margarita, Northern Italy, and also at Beyreuth, Bavaria, a mecca of music where Wagner built an opera house which later resulted in the town becoming famous for its music festivals, over which his widow presided.

These festivals were carried on until the trying days of the World War, when depreciation of currency was said to have sadly depleted the family fortunes.

In 1924, Cosima and her son, Siegfried Wagner, a brilliant conductor, revived the world-famous Bayreuth festivals. In these she participated until last year, when her great age made further activity impossible. Siegfried toured the United States to raise funds for the festival.

"If I can see one more Wagner festival I shall die happy," Cosima had said not long before the restoration of Bayreuth's glory.

FLORIDA JAILS CAPONE AIDES

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 1.—(INS.)—Alphonse Capone, expected here today from Chicago, will find "Machine Gun" Jack McGurn and Tony McGurn, two of his trusted henchmen, in need of assistance.

The two bodyguards, together with Louise Rolfe, Jack's "alibi," were arrested late yesterday and thrown into jail. The three were picked up by Deputy Sheriff D. C. Coleman on the Miami municipal golf links. Search failed to reveal any revolvers.

Miss Rolfe provided McGurn with exemption from prosecution in the St. Valentine's Day massacre. The woman was released.

The arrests are regarded as Gov. Doyle Carlton's answer to the move of Capone's lawyers in obtaining a federal order restraining sheriffs from arresting Capone without a warrant when he visits his Palm Island estate.

Mrs. Capone, who arrived to set the castle in order, said Al was to arrive by airplane today.

Highland 0636 was a "busy line" today. There were hundreds of calls for Mr. Wolf, Mr. Bear and Mr. Camel.

Plenty of wolves, bears and camels were there but the keeper, Supt. of Highland Park Zoo Ernest Tretow refused to answer for them. He fooled the April fool pranksters by staying out of his office and declining to answer the phone.

He did answer it once, however, for a woman who asked if "Mr. Campbell" had called.

"Lady," replied the zoo keeper, "you don't want to talk to Mr. Campbell—you want to look at the calendar."

BRICK BARRAGE RAINS ON AUTOS

A barrage of bricks rained about motorists on the Boulevard of the Allies at Stevenson street at 9 o'clock this morning. Autoists zig-zagged their cars and narrowly escaped colliding with other machines in the stream of traffic as they sought to avoid the missiles.

Police rushed to the scene and arrested Charles Tracey, 31, of 818 Eighth avenue, Homestead, as he was about to hurl another brick into the boulevard. They had been summoned by nurses at Mercy Hospital, alarmed at the peril to autoists.

Among those who escaped the barrage was Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren, who was driving to work. Police declare Tracey had been drinking. He will be given a hearing at the Center Avenue station tomorrow.

8 DIE, 4 MISSING IN RIVER CRASH

ST. HELENS, Ore., April 1.—(AP.)—Death toll of the collision between the coastwise freighter Davenport and the dance barge Swan and its pushboat Dix stood at 80 today, while four still were missing.

Richard Belland, Jr., son of the owner-operator of the barge, whose body previously was reported to have been seen in the pushboat's pilot house as the vessel lay in 60 feet of water in the main channel of the Columbia River, near here, was not found when the boat was raised last night.

Neither was the body of Fred Hoffman, Portland, deckhand on the Dix, found, although he, too, was believed to have been trapped in the pilot house when the push boat plunged under the stern of the barge it propelled. Two other men still were listed as missing, and funerals of three women and one man were to be held at Vancouver, Wash., today.

Anti-German Stage Fund Goes Begging

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP.)—Rather than produce two anti-German war plays British actors have forfeited $3,000. The will of J. Hartley Manners, playwright, left the Royal General Theatrical Fund of London $500 a year for six years on condition that specified plays be produced annually "so that the remembrance of the atrocities committed by the Germans on the English people be kept alive." An appraisal reveals that the bequest has been declined.

5 HINDUS SLAIN IN RIOTING

CALCUTTA, India, April 1.—(AP.)—Five men were killed today in rioting which followed a passive resistance demonstration against enforcement of a new rule restraining carters from taking out buffaloes during the hottest hours of the day.

One Hindu was killed when police fired on a large crowd of carters at Howrey Bridge. The crowd threw brickbats at the police and injured three sergeants. Four more were killed in rioting this afternoon in Harrison road. The district between Howrey Bridge and Harrison road presented the aspect of a battle scene. The streets were jammed with abandoned carts, many overturned and minus wheels.

POONA, Bombay, India, April 1.—(AP.)—A threat of passive resistance against the movement led by Mahatma Gandhi, Nationalist leader, was contained in a manifesto issued today by a new party called the Indian National Anti-Revolutionary party.

The party will try to persuade Gandhi to postpone his civil disobedience movement, contending British rule is necessary until the abolition of caste distinctions.

Hoover Faces Census Quiz 'Even as You and I'

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(AP.)—As "head" of the first family of the land, President Hoover expects to answer the questions of the census taker tomorrow.

Asked at his press conference today whether he or Mrs. Hoover would provide the information, the Chief Executive replied:

"As head of the family, I expect to give that information."

J. Sterling Moran, census supervisor of the District of Columbia, will appear at the White House to enumerate the family. He will carry the same type of big brown portfolio that will be used by all the house-to-house enumerators. He will ask the President the same questions that will be asked of every other family, but he admitted today that one of them puzzled him.

It is the third question.

"Is your house owned or rented?"

Moran has not decided how he will record that, since the White House is neither owned nor rented by the Hoovers.

The President appealed to the nation to co-operate wholeheartedly that the census may be effective.

The values of the census are of paramount importance, he said. From the point of view of government, and from that of economic advance and social determination, every person in the country has an interest in making it absolutely official, he added.

PINCHOT TIEUP WITH GRUNDY INDICATED

...s to throw his full resources of ...pport to Gifford Pinchot, the in...ependent forester. Pinchot won ...hanks to Grundy and John S. ...isher, the present chief execu...ive, who withdrew in favor of ...inchot.

SIMILARITY CITED

Except for the difference that Grundy is now a candidate for office himself, there is almost complete similarity between the situation in 1922 and that of today.

Following the expiration of the time limit for filing petitions last night, the Republican situation simmered down to this:

Grundy, the maker of governors and presidential campaign funds raiser, finds himself with his back to the wall, opposed by a quickly formed but extensive and powerful organization, which arose almost over night around the ticket headed by Secretary Davis for senator and Francis Shunk Brown for governor.

BOTH DENY LINK

Both Grundy and Pinchot have denied there is any linkup of their campaigns, but both have carefully avoided reference to future possibilities in that respect. Friends of two, believing each has something to aid the other, are advising such a course.

Despite the denials of both candidates of any connection of their campaigns, similarity of statements issued in the last several days by Senator Grundy and Pinchot in attacking the Philadelphia organization and its "war board" and charges of "protection" of public utilities by the Public Service Commission lent credence to reports of negotiations toward a hookup of the two candidates.

FIGHTS TAX ISSUE

One issue, injected by Grundy's attack of Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is a battle of corporations, manufacturing industries versus public utilities. In the past Grundy's chief interest in Pennsylvania politics has been prevention of imposition of a tax on manufacturers who have always been granted exemption from state tax as a boon to industry and the more than possible chance that the Davis-Brown ticket, if elected, will sponsor such a tax at the next legislature, has been declared by Grundy associates to be one of the main reasons why the junior senator did not give up in the present fight.

Senator Grundy as well as Pinchot expects support of the Anti-Saloon League of Pennsylvania and other dry organizations, and while there has been nothing to indicate it as yet, it is generally supposed by politicians here that the Davis-Brown ticket platform will contain a wet plank or at least be neutral on the question.

Davis and Brown Leaders At Rally in Philadelphia

The Western Pennsylvania stage is dim today as the big scene in the political drama shifted to Philadelphia, where all candidates on the Davis-Brown ticket are scheduled to confer with leaders from various sections of the state to formally indorse the slate and outline platform and methods.

County Commissioner Joseph O. Armstrong, Judge James B. Drew and Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, who left here last night, were expected to attend the pow-wow. One purpose of the meeting, it is supposed, is to name a state chairman, who in all probability will be Lieut. Gov. Arthur H. James.

Pinchot Visits Malone, Pleased With Support Here

Political observers today are speculating on the significance of former Gov. Pinchot's conference yesterday with James F. Malone, who ran independently for mayor last fall against Mayor Kline.

Pinchot was here two days and met hundreds of friends in promoting his candidacy for another term.

Malone said later the former governor merely made a social call, during which mutual felicitations were exchanged.

ATTACKS RENEWED

Pinchot held the local spotlight yesterday with conferences and a luncheon meeting in the William Penn Hotel. In speeches and written statements he renewed his attacks on "gang rule" in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, on coal and iron police brutality, the Public Service Commission and unequal tax assessments, particularly in agricultural sections.

Pinchot issued an emphatic denial that he would acquiesce to any alignment with Grundy and left last night for Philadelphia.

Pinchot was asked what impression of the Pittsburgh visit he would carry away. He said:

"After seeing several hundreds of people in Pittsburgh personally, and talking with representatives of eight or 10 counties in Western Pennsylvania, I am frankly amazed at the progress the things for which I stand have made already."

Coyne Gives New Life To Grundy Candidacy Here

State Senator Coyne's declaration favoring Grundy's candidacy to succeed himself has given life to the latter's local campaign.

Coyne has either control or substantial influence in about six city wards and may be the Grundy campaign leader in this section. As an individual, Coyne contributed the most support to Mayor Kline's campaign for reelection, but he balked at following the Mayor onto the Davis-Brown bandwagon.

The candidacy of Grundy was indorsed yesterday by the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia, for his "unbending adherence to the highest ideals of public service. It was in accord with those precepts that he has steadfastly refused to make any entangling alliances with professional politicians in his candidacy for nomination at the May primaries."

118 Davises Sign Davis Petition In Carbon

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(AP.)—The Scots are clannish, as everybody knows, but so are the Welsh on occasion.

That's why Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, who was born in Tredegar, Wales, and grew to manhood in Pennsylvania, where he is a candidate for United States senator, is so proud of a petition circulated in Carbon County to have his name printed on the Republican ballot. Signed it was—make no mistake—by 118 registered voters, all of whom were Davises. There was room for no more names.

But the tale does not end there. The appended oath was subscribed to by Harry A. Davis before B. R. Davis, notary public.

23 BYRD AIDES START HOME

DUNEDIN, New Zealand, April 1.—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd tonight said farewell to 23 members of his Antarctic expedition bound for home on the party's vessel, the Eleanor Bolling.

Rain-laden clouds were scudding in from the sea when the Eleanor Bolling made her departure for New York via Panama. In the fading sunlight the ship steamed down the harbor and when night fell, with the vessel still five miles from the open sea, Byrd made his final calls to bid the voyagers au revoir. As he left the ship on a yacht, the Admiral led in cheers for the safe return of the party.

Only Byrd and four other members of the expedition remain in New Zealand, and their departure probably will be deferred until April 24.

DAGUE, BLONDE, BOTH DOOMED, SING IN JAIL

remarks of Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiotti to the jury in closing the Commonwealth's argument yesterday afternoon. They also took exception to motions and objections overruled by Judge R. L. Hildebrand in the trial.

The motion, tabled by Judge Hildebrand as in the case of Irene, was held in abeyance until the testimony in both cases is transcribed, after which counsel for the defense has 10 days in which to file additional reasons for asking new trials. Judge Hildebrand then must set a date for preliminary hearings, following which he must rule on the motions in open court. Should he refuse new trials, attorneys for Irene and Dague may appeal to higher courts and were they to uphold the decisions of the lower courts, the couple's only hope is the Pardon Board.

ONE BALLOT TAKEN

Dague took the pronouncement of the death penalty without batting an eye.

The jury was out barely two hours before signifying that a verdict had been agreed upon. It was understood that only one ballot was necessary.

Dague, with the same expressionless face that has marked his stubborn defiance since his capture in Arizona with Irene two months ago, stalked into court guarded by Sheriff Frank N. Johnson and two deputies.

If ever he displayed interest in his surroundings, he showed something akin to anticipation as the jury of eight men and four women filed into the jury box about 7:45 o'clock. In their faces he seemed to read their verdict, for his eyes fell to the counsel table after hurriedly scanning the jammed courtroom.

WIFE, FATHER ABSENT

Neither his father nor his wife, Mrs. Theresa Dague, were in the room. His brothers also were absent. The only familiar face was that of the Rev. H. O. Teagarden, friend of the Dague family.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, have you a verdict reached?" inquired Clerk of Courts Ralph M. Campbell.

"We have," came from the jury box in unison.

Slowly he spoke the jury's findings.

"—and we find the defendant guilty as indicted of murder in the first degree with the penalty of death."

Dague smiled, then sat down.

JURORS POLLED

Chief Counsel Dickey asked that the jury be polled and one after another the eight men and four women repeated the verdict as their names were called.

At the conclusion of this formality the verdict was entered in the court record book and the volume passed up to the bench for Judge Hildebrand's signature.

He turned to the jury, dismissing them with commendation for a duty well done, then turned to the sheriff and ordered him to remove the prisoner.

JOINS IN HYMN

Passing into the jail where religious services were under way, he turned to the sheriff laughing. He remarked something about "pardon."

Inside the jail, he joined in the religious services, raising his voice in the hymn, "Work for the Night Is Coming."

The Rev. Mr. Teagarden broke the news to Dague's wife and to his father.

Mrs. Vinta Paul McGugin, mother of Corp. Paul, expressed relief that it was "all over."

"It has been most unpleasant to me," she said sadly, "but justice must be served and I am sorry for those relatives who must feel so badly about it all."

PENN BUS LINE HEARING OPENS

Examiner W. E. Best, of the Public Service Commission, today opened a hearing here on the application of the Penn Bus Line, a subsidiary of the West Penn Electric Company, for the right to operate a bus service between McKeesport and Greensburg.

The Penn Bus Line has a contract to take over the service from M. E. Oliver, granted a certificate to operate last fall. David R. Magill, of Irwin, another bus operator, and the Pennsylvania Railroad have protested the granting of the application, but Attorney A. M. Donnan, for the railroad, announced today that his company would withdraw its objection if the Penn Bus Line adhered to an arrangement which the railroad had made with Oliver.

Robeson Applauded By Berlin Audience

BERLIN, April 1.—(AP.)—Paul Robeson, American Negro singer and actor, was warmly applauded by a large audience last night in an English performance of Eugene O'Neill's play, "Emperor Jones," which he had many times played in America.

Robeson was supported by a cast composed chiefly of Germans, but the lines were spoken in English.

COUNTY FIGHTS MARK STATE PRIMARIES

Freyvogel Opposes Mackrell For G.O.P. Committeeman; Legislature Races Warm

James E. Routley, assistant chief clerk to the County Commissioners, today returned from Harrisburg, where he filed Allegheny County petitions to place leading candidates in nomination for others on the Davis-Brown slate.

Routley's papers included those for Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, for United States Senator Judge James B. Drew for Judge of Superior Court Francis Shunk Brown, for governor and Gen. E. C. Shannon for lieutenant governor.

Reports of filings at Harrisburg indicate a number of fights for state committeemen and women and members of the state Senate and House of Representatives.

John A. Freyvogel is opposing Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell for state committeeman from the Forty-third senatorial district. Helen Douglas is opposed to Sadie Snowball for state committeewoman from the Forty-fourth district, Mayme Speaker Nellie Rose Reiter and Ida N. Chaifant are candidates for committeewomen from the Forty-fifth district.

State Senator Morris Einstein of the Forty-second District is opposed by T. H. Doehla. Senator W. D. Mansfield of the Forty-fourth District is opposed by Mary P. Walthour and P. R. Wagner. Herman P. Brandt of the Forty-fifth district is opposed by Park H. Martin. F. V. Stokes' announcement revealed Michael Gorham, D. P. McQuaide and F. X. McCullough.

For the House of Representatives there are 11 candidates for the two places in the First District, 13 for the two places in the Second, 12 for the one place in the Third, six for the one place in the Fourth, 17 for the three places in the Fifth, 16 for the four places in the Sixth, 18 for the four places in the Tenth and 15 for the four places in the Twelfth.

Pass Up Lunch for 'Interlude'

Eugene O'Neill who writes plays for a living has pitted the theater of Bananas apples and oranges. Peanuts. Candy and bon bons.

But he failed to get many women. His "Strange Interlude" opened last night in the Nixon Theater and society, in ermine and velvet, school pupils and newspaper folk crammed the place. There were no policemen there, nor a big shot and one with a uniform. There were a couple of women of generous proportions seated with the curtain rose in the act.

And so passed one of the first of the literary efforts of O'Neill's as well as musical lines like actors, but we George Seibel's review for that. At 7:50 o'clock when the curtain dropped. And in five minutes the theater was empty, its first floor brushed clean of people. A critic remained in row D, seat 2, on the first balcony—its owner perhaps regenerated—that was all there. But in the second balcony—way up there on the shelf—two women sat, one on the far right, one on the left.

NO SIGN OF FOOD

They were reading newspapers. Lady A—on the right—was youthful and plump. Lady B—on the left—was like gram?—sweet and plump. All others had fled.

And nowhere were there peanuts, oranges, apples or bananas. Candy and bon bons were nowhere to be seen. Carefully were the charwomen questioned as to the possibility of a hot sandwich wrapper. There was none.

Said Lady A, when offered some peanuts:

"I don't eat peanuts, thank you!"

Said Lady B: "Papa and I drove in a long way. We climbed these 60 steps, he counted them—and I'm absolutely not going down only to have to come up again. And I don't eat lunches anyhow."

And added Lady A: "I had a salad and some grapefruit at 4:30 this afternoon and I'm not hungry. I do not care for candy, thank you."

And the conversation ended there.

But in a restaurant famous for its one-arm tables, girls and boys—but mostly women—women and women conversed intelligently upon the play. In other restaurants, somewhat ritzier, richly-gowned women sat and smoked, and ate with their companions, discussing the play.

SEEKS 'LOWER BERTHS'

And then they returned to the theater to meet the curtain. At the box office, an enthusiast halted for some tickets. To Louis Joseph, treasurer of the Nixon who looks as if he owns the block, this wise-cracker cracked:

"Can I get two lower berths for Monday night of the third week?"

And then the curtain rose again to drop at 11 o'clock.

If this proves anything, it proves that people can take their food or leave it, but . . .

Ask the check girl if she enjoyed the play. She didn't miss a line, and she had no college education.

But she did admit she likes apples, bananas, oranges and peanuts, candy and bon-bons and "Strange Interlude."

Said lady check girl:

"Wouldn't it be swell to be a chink, those Chinese plays last a whole week."

BLAME SECRECY FOR PARLEY CRITICISM

British M. P., Former Naval Officer, Says U. S. Guilty With Others of War Talk

By LIEUT.-COMMANDER J. M. KENWORTHY, M. P.

Universal Service Special Cable.

LONDON, April 1.—I regret the personal attack made by the Hearst newspapers on the Prime Minister of England. Every man with the responsibility of a prominent minister is entitled to be adjudged sincere.

The mischief has been done and criticism was made possible because of the unnecessary secrecy employed at the London naval conference. All important discussions have taken place behind closed doors and the public has had to rely on conflicting statements from the socalled "official spokesmen" of the various delegations.

From these statements it is evident that all delegations including the American have been thinking more of future war than peace.

Two for Reduction

I myself recommended to Parliament recently that the conference be adjourned for an indefinite period in order that we can begin talking peace again instead of war, with the threat of building programs on both sides of the Atlantic removed from the deliberations. The only real proposals for actual reduction of armaments have been made by President Hoover and the Italian delegation. Both the President and the Italian government have declared themselves willing to reduce navies as low as possible on an agreed ratio.

The mistake was made and all delegations are blameable in not insisting on discussing the use of navies before discussing their strength.

What for example must be the effect the Kellogg pact will have on future laws of blockade if war breaks out?

This query was raised by the French on the freedom of the seas in their memorandum, but no attempt has been made to give the lead to American or British public opinion on this crucial question vitally affecting the whole naval problem.

Aid to Agreement

By getting this question settled we would have made a Franco-Italian agreement easier and lifted the whole conference to a higher plane.

Why is there no answer to the Italian proposal to abolish the great capital ship, costing from $85,000,000 to $40,000,000, and fixing a future limit on such craft at, says 10,000 tons, together with the abolition of submarines?

Why is there no bold and mutual scrapping program for these great, costly, and, in the opinion of naval students, useless super-dreadnaughts put on the table at the beginning of the conference?

The people are entitled to know first, why proposals on these lines were not made public, and secondly, if they were made privately, who objected to them, and why?

Another blunder was the fixing of British cruiser strength at an irreducible minimum of 50 vessels. The apparent affection for great battleships and a minimum of 50 British cruisers has removed any chance of drastic reductions.

All the consulting powers talk of "unthinkable wars." But the conference is thinking nothing else but war and preparation for war, discussing the means of using submarines humanely in an unthinkable war, the use of the French Navy in the Mediterranean in an unthinkable war, the relative value of British and American six-inch gun and eight-inch gun cruisers in an unthinkable war; discussing the defense of the Phillippine Islands and the Singapore naval base against Japan in an unthinkable war, discussing the strategic position of Italy in an unthinkable war.

Man Must Pay

They are even discussing military Franco-Italian guarantees in the Mediterranean in an unthinkable war.

The man in the street must pay for bloated armaments and face death and ruin when war breaks out.

He thought war had been outlawed by the Kellogg pact, and expected the conference's discussions to start from that basis.

The public expected the delegates to seek a method of cutting down armaments, not to see how strong they could make their respective navies, or wrangle little National advantages out of apparently agreed parity and ratios.

'Older Boys' to Hold 'Y' Conference Here

A three-day older boys' conference will be held in the Center Avenue branch Y. M. C. A., beginning Friday, under auspices of the State Y. M. C. A. of Pennsylvania. One hundred and twenty-five delegates from Western Pennsylvania are expected in attendance. State and local leaders in boys' work will give inspirational talks.

New Spring Curtains

Ruffled Criss-Cross Curtains, $2.00 Pair

These new curtains have the full cross that so many home-makers prefer. 50 inches wide and 2¼ yards long. Of ivory or ecru plain marquisette, with 5-inch ruffles, tie-backs and attached cornice valance. Others up to $6.50.

ACCUSED MAN TRIES SUICIDE

STEUBENVILLE, O., April 1.—Lee Burris, 38, wanted in the shooting of Dante Ryder, 41, at the latter's home in Toronto, Ohio, Sunday, was arrested last night at his home in Empire, O., and was taken to the Ohio Valley Hospital suffering from knife wounds.

Detective Meade McLister, who made the arrest, said he found Burris hiding behind a piano and that he slashed himself before he could be disarmed.

Ryder, who police said was shot by Burris in an argument over the former's divorced wife, may not recover. He was shot through the body. He is said to have stepped in front of his wife to protect her when Burris fired, having attempted to prevent a reconciliation between the pair.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Makes One Look Younger

Men and women who used to be called "grandpa" and "grandma" are now getting the smiles by darkening their gray hair at home.

For instance, L. A. Mercier, a well-known Californian, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture in five minutes that will darken gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Merely take a half pint of water and 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at trifling cost. Apply to the hair twice weekly with a comb. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

Today

San Francisco, utilizes some of the gas, but billions of dollars' worth of it must go to waste. There is a chance for the man of inventive mind.

Perhaps Edison could make rubber out of that gas more cheaply than from goldenrod. Gas is very resilient. For gas sold to the gas company, Standard Oil gets from five to seven cents a thousand cubic feet. That seems cheap to one who pays $1.25 on Long Island.

SECRETARY WILBUR is doing excellent work, conserving oil resources. He has arranged to shut off production entirely in one of the richest regions here, the restriction lasting until 1931. The big oil companies co-operate with him.

But some more complete plan is needed. President Hoover has long owned a big ranch near here. It may make him very rich.

WITH only a few hundred thousand dollars back of him, can the little man enter this oil game? He can, and sometimes he wins. To prospectors that will drill, government leases land on royalty.

If one strikes oil in new territory, government will lease to him as much as 2,500 acres, not more, to reward his pioneering. That pays sometimes. For instance, today, a citizen offers Mr. Kingsbury a half interest in a government lease covering about 400 acres. The buyer would have to pay government royalties, and the price asked for the half interest is nine million dollars cash. Mr. Kingsbury says it is probably worth it.

MANY things the oil executive sees in his flying morning. A brief report would fill two newspapers. A column of black smoke, rising 1,000 feet into the air, would have delighted Moses on his travels. Flames flash below the smoke 3,000 feet below the plane. Some one is burning out a sump, getting rid of oil waste.

On a lake nearby there is a thick white mass, which a glass divides into thousands of pelicans. They come to eat. Here and there, throughout the region are great square patches of green, with well kept buildings. Those are Standard Oil camps, oil derricks all about, great storage tanks, offices, men's dwellings.

A STRAIGHT line runs off northwest toward the Pacific. That is the track of a pipe line carrying oil to the bay of San Francisco. Another straight line marks the pipe that runs over the mountains, and out into the ocean just below San Simeon. At its end Standard Oil ships take in 20,000 barrels an hour, big ships are loaded and on their way to Asia or through the Panama Canal in five or six hours. This oil business is systematized.

EVERYWHERE are patches of dark green alfalfa, beautiful orchards, and wide irrigation canals running through the oil lands. You may find on any one of a dozen ranches an old man who has built up his land to a value of two to five hundred dollars an acre. Near him is land that he would not even look at twenty years ago. It is bare, hilly, the earth's surface looking like the top of a gigantic pie crust, fresh from the oven. One acre of that land, formerly despised, may yield ten million dollars' worth of oil.

THE air travellers see clearly the borders of a lake, long since gone dry, its outline as plain as that of a soup plate. Hundreds of farmers working its thirty square miles of surface, cannot see that it ever was a lake. To them it is flat land. That is how history looks to us, when we are too near the events. Carlyle called Marat a "horse doctor." And Marat was the first man that ever performed an operation for cataract on a human being.

THE farmer sinks his plough a few inches into the soil, and raises alfalfa, making a bare living by hard labor. The oil engineer sinks his well nine thousand feet into the earth and nature pumps up millions in oil for him. When will John D. Rockefeller, Jr., or his great-great-grandson, sink a well thirty miles deep, tap the earth's inexhaustible heat and power and make all other power obsolete. Scientists have said it could be done, for $30,000,000. And that seems a small amount, in this land that the late J. Ogden Armour said would make Croesus feel like a gypsy.

YOU should see this region of oil and billions. It helps to convince you that selling America short, or even selling Standard Oil short, is hazardous.

Here at Bakersfield, you see and admire the Kern County airport, first ever established by any county. It contains more than five hundred millions square feet of landing space. This is a big country, with big things in it. Also this writing is cruelly long. But you are forced to read it.

Don't Go to Extremes To End Constipation

When bad breath, or a coated tongue, biliousness or headaches warn of constipation, don't take violent purgatives. There's no use when a candy Cascaret will stop the trouble in a jiffy; will cleanse your system pleasantly, and completely.

The relief you get so promptly from Cascarets is lasting. Cascarets are made from cascara, a substance which medical authorities agree actually strengthens the bowel muscles.

So Cascarets are a blessing to old folks with weakened bowels; to children; to anyone in need of establishing regular bowel habits. Ten cents a box—all drug stores.

Mr. Chas. C. Kichak Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples.

"I had been troubled with pimples for the last few years. They were hard but after a few days would get red and festered. After that they would break and then scale over. They were on my chest, back and shoulders. The breaking out caused great discomfort and the irritation caused me to scratch until they would bleed.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and got good results, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Chas. C. Kichak, 543 N. 7th St., Phila. Pa., June 14, 1929

CHARGE DENIED BY ATTORNEY

Hot denial that he has said, in the presence of the jury, that he would not be trying the case if he did not believe the defendant was guilty, was made by Assistant District Attorney Earl R. Jackson during argument before Judge A. B. Reid and the full bench, for a new trial of the arson case in which a verdict of guilty was returned February 5 against Samuel Benjamin, charged with burning his business block at Butler and Fifty-second streets.

Attorney Louis Little made the charge as one of the reasons advanced for the granting of a new trial. Judge Reid withheld his decision.

A test case is to be made of the action of a jury in placing the costs on the defendant in the case of Jacob Cohen, in a bad check case tried before Judge James H. Gray. The judge directed a verdict of guilty and sent the jury out to decide on the placing of the costs. Attorney J. I. Simons argued that the costs could not be placed on the defendant as the jury did not have the evidence to pass upon, and said if the decision is adverse he will appeal to the higher court.

BOYS HELD AS SAFE ROBBERS

Two 12-year-old schoolboys were under arrest in Homestead today as would-be safe robbers.

O. B. Chambers, janitor of the First National Bank Building, Eighth avenue and Ann street, Homestead, was awakened early today by his wife, who heard a noise of persons walking in the hallway.

Chambers investigated, he reported to police, and found two boys trying to work the combination of a safe of Dr. C. C. Rinard, a dentist, in an alcove outside his office in the same building.

Chambers held the lads until police arrived. The two are being detained pending an investigation by the Homestead police. Numerous dental office robberies have been reported in Homestead in recent months. Because of the youth of the boys their names were withheld.

PSYCHOGENIC DRAMA, LEHAR MUSIC, STOCK COMEDY CURRENT STAGE BILLS

We Sit Through Nine Acts Of "Strange Interlude" And Recess to Dine

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

MOMENTS of great drama, moments of rich poetry, burst like rockets every now and then in that curious nine-act Human Comedy which Eugene O'Neill has called "Strange Interlude," and which was watched at the Nixon Theater last night by an audience that filled the three tiers of the auditorium.

It is a "Human Comedy"—though it is conceived as tragedy. Somehow you get the impression that all those poor creatures up there on the stage are either worms on the fish hooks of the Fates or fishes caught by that wiggling bait. At any rate, it is tragedy for the people in the play—and for the spectator who can peer behind the purpose of the dramatist, it must appear like an Ironic Allegory of life.

George Seibel

Ironic Allegory—that is what the drama turns out. In the playing of it, this becomes more apparent than in the reading.

The soliloquies and asides that read in the book like a reversion to the Elizabethan technique, become in the acted play an even greater anachronism—for here they sound like the chorus of Greek Tragedy.

It was the business of the Chorus to explain what the characters were doing, to furnish a commentary and interpretation, and also to point out the purpose of the high gods. That is what these "asides" also do in O'Neill's play—only the gods they reveal are Freud and Einstein, the biologic urge and the cosmic futility.

And we, spectators at the grim panorama, applaud the wiggling fishes and then adjourn to dine before we witness their last hopeless gasps.

NEED THREE CRITICS

The first might tackle the ethical aspects of the "Strange Interlude"—the dramatic conflict between Hedonism, the philosophy of pleasure and Masochism, the instinct of sacrifice.

The second critic ought to be an authority on the neurotic and erotic degeneration of the female organism. Nina is a remarkable "case." She is the Eternal Feminine of Goethe as seen by Schopenhauer.

The third critic might take apart the dramatic structure of the play and show how badly the cams and ratchets interlock. Almost one is tempted to say that it is not a play but a novel.

Then the three critics could come together in consultation, and would have to admit that it was a very interesting philosophical and biological exhibition, with some moments of great drama and some moments of rich poetry.

ONLY ONE CHARACTER

But in their final verdict the critics would very likely also agree that though there are nine actors, there is only one character in the nine acts. That character is Eugene O'Neill. It might have been Schopenhauer, but old Arthur wrote no dramas. It might have been Strindberg—for this play often reminds one of "The Father" and "Countess Julie"—but Strindberg had the excuse of being insane. But it is O'Neill, rebel and mocker, who has put his doubts and furies into all these people caught on the fishhook of sex.

It is really marvelous that he has squeezed so much drama out of one character. It is done at the expense of consistency and logic. It may be doubted whether there is any woman so utterly selfish and depraved and malevolent as Nina, and it is certain that there are no three men in any circle who are quite such magnificent nincompoops as Marsden, Evans and Darrell.

If these parts were not played by three fine actors like Ernest Glendinning, Blaine Cordner and George Gaul, they would be altogether incredible. George Gaul does a particularly convincing piece of work. It is he who brings out the irony of the allegory most graphically, the other two being wriggling worms rather than philosophical fish.

SPILLING THE DICTIONARY

O'Neill the dramatist might have pruned his dialogue of much rank verbiage, for he has spilled the dictionary over every scene. But this is hardly noticeable because there are two dramas going on at the same time. And in watching both of them the audience forgets the excess baggage.

It is also curious to note that Elisabeth Risdon, who plays Nina, is far more effective in the undercurrent than in the main action. It is easily conceivable that Lynn Fontanne, the original Nina, may have been more effective in the drama of the surface. Miss Risdon got the explosive psychology of the neurotic into action as admirably as George Gaul interpreted the savage irony.

The professor of moral philosophy, the gynecologist who studies hysteria, and the technician of the drama will all find this "Strange Interlude" equally interesting, but its physiology is far better than its ethics or its construction. Well, it is a thankless task to turn a microscope upon a Dinosaurus!

SOUTH POLE PICTURED IN METROTONE NEWS

Remarkable pictures of the Antarctic, made personally by Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins, noted explorer and commander of the Hearst-Wilkins Expedition to the South Pole, are being shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News at leading theaters throughout the country. Wilkins gives a brief talk explaining the object of the expedition and the importance of the discoveries which he made. Then are shown for the first time the thrilling and beautiful pictures made by Sir Hubert in the vicinity of the South Pole. They include views of tremendous icebergs encountered in the open sea, age-old glaciers and remarkable scenes made from Wilkins' plane as it flew over the territory in the vicinity of the South Pole.

An advance view of the latest spring fashions direct from Paris are displayed, by Tobe, celebrated stylist. The gowns were made by Chanel, famous Parisian modiste.

HERO SNORES WHILE AUDIENCE KEEPS AWAKE IN PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The intrigues of love and big business, seen through comedy spectacles, move on their intriguing and amusing way in "Two Girls Wanted," the current George Sharp presentation in the Pitt. It is a play by Gladys Unger and its original production was at the hands of John Golden.

The plot chiefly concerns a stenographer, who gets a position as a serving maid in a wealthy home and is the means of preventing the man she loves from getting the worst of it in a business deal.

Edith King is there as the heroine, looking attractive either behind a typewriter or in the dress of a domestic. And well she registers the symptoms of this thing called love. How she is thrilled when the boy friend sends her flowers!—the first she "ever received in a box." Nightgowned and barefooted, she jumps into bed, taking the flowers with her.

'PLASTERED'—AND HOW

Harland Tucker is there as the hero, an aristocratic youth who "dresses for dinner." A chauffeur brings him home at 4 a. m. and the serving maid gasps, "Is he dead?" But he's only "plastered." And how!

Mabel Kronaa is there, glorifying—we suppose you could call it that—the stern-garbed business woman. As the faithful secretary of a golf-mad financier, she finds that devotion to duty isn't without compensation. She gets a sherbet-glass full of ice cream in the second act and the promise of a wedding ring in the third.

MAKEUP AND SNORES

Numerous others are there, too, including Walter F. Jones, who sports a sporty pair of knickers; Robert Fiske, with silver threads that add two decades to his age; Alice Ann Baker, as a society matron who finds an audience with Queen Mary doesn't help one with the cook; Lucette Parker, as a coquette who goes in for a modernistic pajama ensemble, and Henry Wadsworth, who flaunts too much makeup about his eyes.

There is a canary bird also. Which ordinarily wouldn't be news. But this bird has the gout.

And another thing. The hero snores.

But then, what of it? He is the only one in the theater you see—or hear—sleeping. The play manages to keep everyone else awake.

MUSIC

SYRIA MOSQUE

PROGRAM.

Concerto No. 3, G Major, for String Orchestra ..... Bach
Symphony No. 3, F Major, Opus 90 ..... Brahms
"The Waits," a Choreographic Poem ..... Ravel
Selections from Act III, "Siegfried" ..... Wagner
Siegfried Ascending Brunhilde's Rock.
Brunhilde's Awakening.
Finale.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra gave the last concert in the series of the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association in Syria Mosque last night. In spite of important theatrical attractions, the audience was larger by far than on the occasion of this orchestra's last appearance, and the response was no less enthusiastic in spite of the trying program.

J. Fred Lissfelt

And it was a trying program for anyone who came for amusement. For the dyed-in-the-wool classicist, the program was the best to be had. On the unshakeable foundations of Bach, rose the admirable architecture of Brahms' Third Symphony. Ravel in holiday mood, and Wagner in one of his grandest ecstasies completed the music.

Frederick Stock's interpretations are as substantial as the works he chooses to play. In the orchestra he has a well-nigh perfect instrument, and he is little concerned with flamboyant effects. He plays the score well. And when his players rise to a real and artistically planned climax we have orchestral music of the first order.

His Bach portray the staunch and vigorous Teuton, rather than the musician who played for beautiful nuance. In the Brahms, he seeks a continuous outpouring of sonorous and mellow sounds, and traces those intricate patterns not like Saracen arabesques, but like the deeper cutting in Gothic designs.

When Ravel wrote his "Waltz" he must have listened intently to Richard Strauss' "Rosenkavalier." This tone poem begins in a haze, and develops into a luscious stirring waltz, but it is possible that the variations which follow, as the apotheosis of the dance, are too prolix, and his clever orchestration cannot forget itself for the central idea. Mr. Stock generously played us as an extra a very recent work of Ravel, "The Bolero," a brilliant example of his knowledge of the orchestra, and a happy picture of Spanish holiday dancing. The monotony of rhythm only enhances the truth of the picture, and places the orchestral handling in flattering relief.

An arrangement of the finale from Wagner's "Siegfried" closed the program, proving once again the importance of the human voice to say the last word in that score.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Miss Normand Wills Estate to Mother

LOS ANGELES, April 1.—(AP.)—An estate valued at $94,000 was left by Mabel Normand, screen comedienne, who died here recently after a long illness. The will filed for probate bequeathed the estate to the actress' mother, Mrs. Mary D. Normand.

The estate consisted of $9,000 in cash, $35,000 in real estate and $50,000 in jewelry. Lew Cody, actor and husband of Miss Normand, was left $1 and appointed administrator. In her will, Miss Normand said Cody was amply provided for and he informed the court on posting bond that he was worth $75,000.

"COCK ROBIN" PICTURE SHOWN AT PENN BY PHILO VANCE

It is a well-known principle of detective fiction that the crime has to be committed by the most unlikely person at hand, and that everybody has to be suspected in turn until the criminal is finally found.

"The Bishop Murder Case," based on a story by S. S. Van Dine, and made into a picture seen in the Penn Theater this week, fills all these requirements.

And it also gives Philo Vance, the encyclopedic detective invented by Van Dine, a chance to air his knowledge of everything from Mother Goose to Ibsen and Nietzsche.

FOR COLLEGE GRADS

From this you may get the idea that this picture is for highbrows. Oh, no—there are plenty of exciting murders and thrilling moments of mystery for the rest of us.

Basil Rathbone, who plays Vance, does it without making us too conscious of our inferiority. At any rate we can follow the Mother Goose strands of the complicated web without too much mental strain. When Joseph Cochrane Robin is found murdered with an arrow through his heart, and a certain "Sperling" is suspected of the crime, we follow the clue to little Jack "Sparrow" with his bow and arrow.

TO THE BITTER END

We follow that clue to the bitter end, though it leads us through all sorts of learned tangles and thickets. In short, here is a perfect crime that is only too perfect.

After that we are glad for the pleasant diversity of the stage show, introduced by Ella Breeskin with an orchestral potpourri of Victor Herbert melodies. Marie and Antoinette are two girls who do some very graceful dancing, while Erner and Fisher are two lads who do some very comical dancing. But the LaSalice Brothers, in serio-comic acrobatic stunts, make the greatest hit. And Jack Sidney proves a very efficient master of ceremonies, despite the menace of the Red Hand.

The bill in the Penn will change Friday.

MR. MORGAN PEEVED

READERS want to know if Will Osborne's real tag is Oliphant . . . J. P. Wilkin's bride did not meet him on his return from the Antarctic . . . S. Jay Kaufman is back from Yurrup with Hungarian plays . . . Homer Orvis of the social reg was knocked cold by a cab, the driver of which bathed his wounds and then robbed him.

ITS TROUBLE TO WAIT

Broadway's biggest thrill is when the fire wagons, with their sirens screeching, weave in and out of the 11 p. m. therater traffic . . . Cook & Oatman, vaudevillians, got word that their Oklahoma property has oil, gushing from five to 7,000 barrels daily, rating them two bits per barrel . . . Those 100 songs for 5 cent racketeers which were outlawed by the courts are still congesting the Broadway district . . . A wisecracker or wisecrack is now called "a wisey."

Patricia Caron, who once was simply crazy about them, his given up men to concentrate on her cinema career . . . The John Jasons have pfft!

SHOULD JOIN UNION

WHAT with consolidation and this and that, you can hire good bank vice presidents for $3,500 per yr. . . . The success of "Green Pastures" has the boys busy preparing morality theme shows. "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and "The Miracle Man" now being readied . . . Nine different stage and screen stars have vigorously denied that they were beaten up for dancing with a sepia in a Harlem hotspot, after the incident was blind-paragraphed here . . . Hundreds have hastened to write in that we boned it when we reported: "If you could count up to 200 in a minute, 9,512 years, 342 days and 20 minutes would pass before you could count to a million" . . . It wasn't a boner, at all . . . See your dictionary, which defines Billion as: "A cardinal number. In the French system of numeration, a thousand millions. The English system, a million millions!" So all of us are right.

"Merry Widow" Comes Back to the Alvin With Old Charm

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

TURNING the clock backwards a couple of decades, "The Merry Widow," in the Alvin last night brought back days when enchantment and illusion on the stage were still modern and simplicity of narrative, combined with what we now regard as rather elementary comedy, were a sufficient foundation on which to festoon entrancing musical drapery that still impresses as having a melodic quality more fitting to survive than the drama it so effectively decorates.

Which is to say that this operetta, which made Franz Lehar famous, still is a musical gem of purest ray serene, and that if one attends with that idea in mind, ample satisfaction will be the reward. In fact, one is apt to regard it as the high spot of the light operatic revival that has occupied the Alvin for several weeks.

FIRST APPEARANCE

One source of this satisfaction is sure to be Beppie De Vries, as Sonia, the merry widow, whose inherited fortune causes young men whose interest is in money to seek her hand in marriage, and the diplomatic corps of her native country to attempt to arrange a match with a prince of her own country so that the lady's bankroll may be kept where it is badly needed for state purposes. Miss De Vries is a delight. She sings pleasingly and dances with the grace of youth. It is her first appearance here.

BRIAN IS DANILO

Opposite her, in the role of Prince Danilo, is Donald Brian—the same Donald Brian who created the Danilo part in the original American production. He has all the elegance and sprightliness of manner that marked his first appearances in the part. Oscar Pigman, veteran comedian, is excellent as Baron Popoff, Marsovian ambassador to Paris, attempting to arrange a marriage that will save his country from bankruptcy, and deceived husband, whose wife's flirtations are the basis of the principal comedy scene.

Ethel Jane Walker plays well the role of Natalie, wife of the baron, and she and Craig Campbell, as her admirer, win applause for a couple of vocal duets that are outstanding. Mr. Campbell has a ringing voice and knows how to use it. All of the old melodies, including "The Merry Widow Waltz," are the cause of much genuine pleasure.

AGED PENSIONS WIN IN N. Y.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 1.—Without a dissenting vote the Assembly last night passed and sent to the governor a measure designed to provide old age relief for worthy indigent persons who have passed the age of 70 and have been residents of the state for at least 10 years.

At about the same time the Senate passed another bill designed to set up a bureau to administer the old age relief. This also was sent to the governor, having pasesd the Assembly previously.

No fixed payments are provided by the terms of the relief bill, but it is estimated the payments will average about $244 per person per year. The cost is to be borne jointly by the state and the counties and is expected to amount to about $12,500,000 a year.

JAILED YEAR IN AUTO THEFT

A plea that Roderic Dhue Ridsdale, 22, was on his way to attend a retreat in a monastery in New York when he was arrested on a charge of transporting a stolen automobile failed to save him from a prison sentence when he was arraigned in Federal Court today. Judge Robert M. Gibson sentenced him to one year in Atlanta.

The Rev. Waldo A. Amos, pastor of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church, testified that Ridsdale was on his way to the monastery when he was seized by state troopers at Greensburg. Ridsdale, a resident of Louisville, Ky., is charged with having stolen the automobile in Hollywood, Cal.

Commission Orders Span Over Crossing

HARRISBURG, April 1.—(AP)—Elimination of the grade crossing at the point where the Western Allegheny Railroad tracks cross Perry highway, between Pittsburgh and Mercer, near Grant City, Lawrence County, by erection of an overhead bridge was ordered today by the Public Service Commission, the improvement to cost $268,778. Site of the new bridge will be approximately 200 feet east of the crossing. The work is to be completed by December 31, 1930.

Guest, Hurt in Auto, Wins $3,100 Verdict

Margaret Howard, of Kecksburg, Pa., was awarded $3,100 damages by a consent verdict reached in court today as her case against Paul Kalson, contractor, of Roberts street, was about to start. She alleged that while a guest in Kalson's car, she suffered the loss of part of her hand when the tire blew out and the car crashed into a bridge abutment at United, Westmoreland County, June 12, 1928.

Services For Hadley At Yale, April 11

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 1.—(INS.)—While the body of Dr. Arthur Twining Hadley, president emeritus of Yale University, was being carried home on a special funeral car over the Santa Fe route, in which he was a director, Yale officials were planning Dr. Hadley's funeral.

Services for the great Yale leader will be held in Battell Chapel on Friday afternoon, April 11. Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes will conduct the services.

Bell Weighing Ton Stolen From Church

FRANKLIN Pa., April 1.—Residents of the once famous oil boom town Hithole today discovered that the bell in the historic Methodist Church, weighing a ton and worth $800, was missing. BRINGING ON A DECLINE IN HEALTH

How Many People Deceive Themselves Into Permanent Invalidism—And How to Prevent It.

Rarely do we appreciate a blessing while we have it. When it is gone we know what we have lost. One has only to look at the people on the streets to realize how many have lost the greatest blessing of all—good health.

That health can be regained is true in most cases. But it is a long and costly process, even under the most favorable conditions. So it is far better to use every effort to retain good health.

This message is to those who do not feel well—those people who are hovering on the edge, where a few words of counsel may make all the difference. Nature is telling you when you will need her sooner that in some way you are overtaxing your body. She tells you by your indifferent appetite, your difficulty in sleeping, your lack of concentration, and your tired feeling. When you notice these, it is time to act.

One thing you must do, and do quickly, is to help Nature expel all the waste matter that is clogging your system. That means reinstating activity on the part of the bowels, liver, kidneys and stomach—for these organs to functioning properly and then build up your strength.

For this very purpose a wonderfully effective prescription has been put on the market under the name of World's Tonic. Its effect is twofold. It clears away the waste matter gently, and it arouses the great sifters of the body to normal activity, so that liver and kidneys help purify the blood. Then World's Tonic soothes and invigorates, so that soon the body is back to normal, the blood supply is pure and rich, the organs are working perfectly—and you are well!

Why, with such a simple remedy at hand, proved by the experience of thousands, will you permit yourself to go into decline, and deceive yourself into invalidism? World's Tonic can be obtained at Dow's, Liggett's & May's, Murphy's and all other good drug stores. (A-47)

She Is Making Her Mother Happy

"A big change came over Edna from the time I started giving her Acidine regularly for her sour stomach," says Mrs. Hagan, of 463 First st., Brooklyn. "She likes to take Acidine because it tastes just like peppermint. Therefore I can give it to her regularly enough to help her. Since she's so much brighter and happier now, I want every mother who has the same trouble as I had to know how she can get it off her mind."

Too much acid makes grown folks suffer from biliousness and indigestion. You can imagine then, why it keeps a child's delicate little stomach so upset she has no appetite and gets puny, pale and drowsy. More than two million people are using Acidine regularly because it actually sweetens a sour stomach so quickly, tastes so good and costs so little. Get Acidine at any drug store.

ONLY a few short months before they met she was pale—had black circles under eyes—frequent headaches—back and side ached—months of suffering at more or less regular intervals had borne her down. This was all changed by a fortunate incident for she consulted Dr. Pierce's Clinic in Buffalo, N. Y., and received free medical advice by mail, which changed her whole outlook on life. Dr. Pierce will welcome correspondence from you, too.

Read what one woman says after using Dr. Pierce's medicines, which are sold by all druggists:

"I feel it my duty to tell of the wonderful benefit I received from Dr. Pierce's medicines. I cannot praise them too highly as they are just what they are claimed to be. I used the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' also the 'Favorite Prescription' combined, and I am now enjoying health. I suffered with feminine trouble, which caused soreness and pain in the right side. I grew weary, feeling miserable at all times, thinking recovery was impossible, but at present I am enjoying life better than ever."—Mrs. Myrtle Clark, Logan Mills, Pa.

The Year 1930 BELONGS TO ADVERTISERS

Deeds, Not Words, Make Prosperity

There is little of glory for the optimist who shouts "Business is going to be good in 1930," and while contemplating these epigrammatic words, lets the merchant of the store next door take trade that might have been his, through advertising. The man who advertises his products, moves those products. Products sold, mean more products manufactured. More products manufactured mean cheaper prices, lower living costs and more employment. In the meantime the wise advertiser is increasing his volume, hastening his turnover, enjoying prosperity. Roger W. Babson, noted economic authority, pursues this line of logic and concludes, "Advertising can revive business quicker than anything else." In 1929, more than $2,000,000,000 was spent through advertising channels to move more than forty billions in merchandise. A recent survey in New York among national advertisers shows that both of these figures will be substantially increased during 1930. That, we claim, is the best evidence of the happy prophesies for better business. Its cause—one thing—advertising.

There Is News in Advertising

Advertising, in its broadest sense, is news. It is news of the most valuable sort. It is news of how the budget may be stretched, how the income may be made to do more things. It is news of the great commercial age in which we live. All of Pittsburgh's important merchants are contributing reporters to the Sun-Telegraph's complete advertising news columns. In these columns they tell you what is new, what is good and what, where and how you may buy. These merchants present you with facts. It is your duty to yourself to read these facts, to learn what they are reporting for your benefit. You should acquaint yourself with the advertising columns of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph every day. Use this treasury of mercantile information as your own buying guide. The Sun-Telegraph publishes all the store news of Pittsburgh's important merchants. Get the Sun-Telegraph habit. Keep abreast of the times. Read its news. Good news. News of true prosperity. Read the advertising columns of the Sun-Telegraph every day.

ONLY THE SUN-TELEGRAPH CAN DELIVER YOUR MESSAGE TO SUN-TELEGRAPH READERS

NEW INSURANCE SALES GAIN

Large increases in new life insurance bought by the public last month and during the first quarter of this year indicate better business conditions generally and growing optimism, according to H. G. Scott, senior vice president of the Reliance Life Insurance Company of Pittsburgh, which showed a gain of 84.5 per cent in life insurance paid for and placed in force by its national sales organization last month compared with that of March, 1929.

Scott, who has just returned from a business trip through the South, said he found evidence of better conditions and optimism among businessmen in the building programs and other improvements now started or under contract.

Reliance Life last month issued new life insurance policies totaling $11,371,715, a new monthly record. New life insurance placed in force by Reliance Life during the past three months amounted to $21,357,000, an increase of 33.5 per cent over the first quarter of 1929.

FORD FACTORY UNDER GUARD

DETROIT, April 1.—(INS.)—Dearborn police today guarded the River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company to prevent a repetition of yesterday's disorders when tear gas and clubs were used to disperse between 10,000 and 15,000 disappointed job seekers.

Rumors that the Ford Company was about to hire a large number of men brought thousands to the employment office. Disappointed, the men became unruly. Police broke up the crowds.

A detail of eight policemen was kept on duty through the night. The officers will be kept there today.

French Astronomer Questions U. S. Find

PARIS, April 1.—(AP.)—The importance of planet "X," discovered by the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., was questioned today by Fernand Balbet, associate astronomer at the Government Observatory at Meudon. M. Balbet, in a note presented to the Academy of Sciences, reported that he had observed the "planet," but estimated its diameter as 4,000 miles instead of the 20,000 which ame American observation reckoned. He believed that the body was only one-five hundredth the size of the earth and suggested further observation before accepting it as a real planet.

BUTLER SCOUTS ANTI-DRY TALK

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., April 1.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler last night declared in an address here that nine-tenths of the agitation over prohibition is newspaper talk.

Speaking before the West Virginia University Forum, the U. S. Marine officer asserted that enforcement of prohibition will never be 100 per cent effective even in big cities but with all its imperfections the Eighteenth Amendment is getting us somewhere with the people who are the backbone of the nation.

"We are in a bad way in this country if we begin to cut each other's throats over a glass of liquor," he said.

In the way of prophecy, Gen. Butler predicted that the next world war will be fought in China because of the great market that nation affords the manufacturing nations of the world.

"Only the seacoast of China has been scraped," he said. "There is a market for anything American in China today, but the field will not be left for us alone. Since the Treaty of Portsmouth in 1905, Japan has had a foothold in China which will inevitably lead to the introduction of her products. Sooner or later a new generation will force the world into another great war, and China will provide the battlefield."

WIFE, MATE NOT VOTE RIVALS

HUGHES, Ark., April 1.—(AP.)—There is no contest between husband and wife for the office of alderman in today's municipal election here.

Mrs. E. J. Chaffin, whose name appeared on a ticket for municipal offices composed entirely of women while that of her husband, Dr. Chaffin, is listed on a ticket made up wholly of men, declared that she is not a candidate for the office.

"When they told me a day or two ago that my name had been placed on the women's ticket, I regarded it as a joke and thought no more of it," Mrs. Chaffin said. "I have no intention of running for office.

"Even if I was running I would not oppose Dr. Chaffin," Mrs. Chaffin said. "Rather we would be running as partners."

$350,000 RUM ON SEIZED SHIP

NEW YORK, April 1.—(INS.)—Warning shots fired during a chase inside the 12-mile limit off the New Jersey coast resulted today in the capture of the Nova Scotian schooner, Adam, carrying 5,000 cases of liquor.

The rum runner, flying the Canadian flag, hove to after Coast Guard Patrol Boat 145 opened fire as the schooner tried to beat her way outside the limit.

The boat and the liquor are valued at $350,000, according to government authorities.

News of the capture became known when the Adam, with her crew of 10, was towed into the Coast Guard base at Stapleton, S. I. Later she was to be taken to the army base in South Brooklyn, where her cargo was to be unloaded.

100 Autos Lost in Willys-Knight Fire

TOLEDO, O., April 1.—(AP.)—More than $280,000 damage was done by a spectacular fire which swept the loading docks of the Willys Overland Company late yesterday and burned more than 100 new cars, 31 box cars and a 700-foot loading dock. Alfred B. Qualy, secretary of the Overland, estimated his companies loss at $125,000.

The majority of the cars burned were Willys-Knights which had been loaded in the cars for shipment or were awaiting loading on the dock.

2 Heroic Soldiers Killed in Action Given D. S. C.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(AP.)—Posthumous awards of the Distinguished Service Cross to two American soldiers, who died together November 10, 1918, when they swam the Meuse River in a midnight attack, were announced today by the War Department.

The slain men were Sergt. Victor C. Lee, whose mother is Mrs. Anna McGregor, of Denver, Col., and Pvt. Ole Alendal, whose father is Knut Alendal, of Viborg, S. D.

Both awards were for "extraordinary heroism in action." They had volunteered as members of a patrol which tried to swim the Meuse under fire from artillery, field guns and hand grenades. Alendal was killed as he swam, but Lee reached the German bank before he died.

ANTARCTIC SHIP REACHES PORT

ADELAIDE, South Australia, April 1.—(AP.)—Scarred by blizzards of the Antarctic, the ship, Discovery, with members of the Sir Douglas Mawson expedition, reached here today. A big crowd was on hand to welcome the returning explorers.

Sir Douglas, who sailed from Cape Town last October, said a tremendous amount of work had been accomplished, and several hundred miles had been added to the coastline of Antarctica. Notable results had been achieved through scientific investigations in the whaling areas, he reported.

"We found airplanes most useful during our stay in the far South," he said. "Our plans for the future are indefinite, and no complete report of what was accomplished will be available for some days. The health of the party was good throughout and the provisions lasted admirably."

ASK HOOVER AID ON DOPE CURB

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(AP.)—The District of Columbia grand jury reported that narcotic prescriptions had been forged and it recommended that Congress enact legislation to provide prescription blanks for narcotics similar to those required of physicians administering liquor to their patients.

Such legislation, the grand jury said, should assist very materially in preventing forgery and would aid the authorities in checking violations. It asked that a copy of this portion of its report be sent to President Hoover and to Speaker Longworth.

2 GIRLS GUILTY OF SEDITION

CADIZ, O., April 1.—(AP.)—Betty Gannetti and Zorki Yoki, young Cleveland women, last night were convicted of criminal syndicalism growing out of the distribution of alleged anti-government literature during a Communist demonstration at Martins Ferry last fall. They were released on $1,000 bond each, pending an appeal for a new trial.

The jury, composed of nine farmers and three merchants, returned its verdict in three hours. Conviction carries a penalty of not more than 10 years' imprisonment and a fine not to exceed $5,000. The appeal for a new trial will be heard Saturday by Common Pleas Judge George O. Canaga.

Gleaming hair!

The way modern hair dressers accentuate your hair by lovely lines and contours makes it important to keep the hair in perfect condition.

Now, millions know the quickest way to give the hair new life and lustre; to bring out its natural color, is with Danderine. It is so easy to use; you simply moisten your brush with it each time you arrange your hair.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; stops falling hair; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It helps the hair grow long, silky, abundant; gives it more lustre than brilliantine. It makes the hair easy-to-arrange; holds it in place. Waves look nicer; stay in longer when "set" with Danderine.

Girl's Letter

MARCIA C hasn't found the key to romance . . .

"He likes me, Miss Dix," she writes, "but there isn't a sign of his falling in love with me, and yet he's the one man in the world—"

To all the girls like Marcia in this big city I want to say . . . don't be disheartened . . . romance can be yours. It is every girl's birthright. To win out, Marcia, you must first have faith in yourself. Faith in your daintiness—your charming femininity.

Clothes will help you . . . for clothes have a subtle effect on a woman's psychology . . . and I don't mean just the clothes that show.

When everything you wear—including your lingerie, your stockings, all your intimate things—is very dainty, colorful, you yourself feel perfectly charming.

And because you FEEL charming you ARE charming.

It is all summed up in two simple rules—

FIRST Buy the loveliest, laciest underthings you can, for they make you believe in yourself.

SECOND Keep them colorful, shimmering, like new—for drab, faded underthings cannot give you this feeling of dainty femininity.

You may ask, But how can we keep these delicate things color-fresh in spite of frequent washing—colors fade so easily?

No doubt colors do fade when washed the ordinary way with ordinary soap, but there is a wonderful product made especially to preserve color in the daintiest fabrics.

"You must have faith in yourself—in your daintiness—in your charming femininity"

Of course I mean LUX. LUX is especially made to cleanse without disturbing the loveliness of colors, the shimmering beauty of dainty fabrics. DOROTHY DIX

ALIMONY FACES SONG WRITER

LOS ANGELES, April 1.—(AP.)—Nacio Herb Brown, song writer, was ordered to pay Mrs. Ruby Porter Brown $750 a month alimony after a hearing in Superior Court in connection with her separate maintenance suit.

Mrs. Brown asked for the custody of their 9-year-old son and $2,400 a month alimony. She declared her husband has an income of $8,500 a month and owns $450,000 in royalty rights. Brown said his income was only $1,000 a month. The custody of the child was not determined. Mrs. Brown charged cruelty.

ALIEN JOB BAR RESCINDED

DETROIT, April 1.—(AP.)—The Detroit City Council voted unanimously to rescind its recent action barring aliens from employment by the city. Jobs of more than 1,600 city employes, mostly laborers, were affected by the order.

The action followed a series of protests against the ban on alien employes. After the resolution directing the discharge of non-voters was passed, it was discovered that most of the City Hall scrubwomen were aliens. The scrubwomen requested a public hearing.

The purpose of the resolution against employing aliens, as announced by proponents of the measure, was to relieve the unemployment situation.

Clarence E. Wilcox, corporation counsel, a few days ago was asked for an opinion on the right of the council to take the action.

Is Your Sister-in-Law's Baby More Popular Than Yours?

Of course you will not admit it, but you know your sister-in-law's little boy, while he is not half so good looking, is far more popular than your little girl.

And why?

Your baby is by far the sweeter child—a little dear of a youngster in all respects save one.

Of course you say "I can't prevent her from being irritable—she is just a cranky baby; and she will grow out of that!"

All very nice, but there is a reason why Jane is cranky and John is not. And the reason is that Jane is uncomfortable—she is unhappy in her body—she is suffering from irritation that you can check and prevent altogether if you will.

Her little body is hot with feverish chafing in the folds of the skin. Her clothes irritate her because her skin is coarse and harsh. Perhaps it is due to the roughening effect of water.

Now you can stop all that. Every morning after bathing your baby rub its entire body gently with Mennen Baby Oil—being sure to get it into the folds and creases of the skin so that you will prevent chafing.

And during the day, after every diaper change, massage the child's buttocks with Mennen Baby Oil to water-proof the skin and to prevent the acid and fecal matter from clinging to and attacking the skin.

Do this regularly and watch how soft and smooth your baby's skin becomes, and how quickly you will change an irritable baby into a happy lovable one.

And be sure, after wiping the excess oil off to dust Mennen Borated Talcum over the entire body.

Special Offer! This week your druggist is offering a can of Mennen Borated Baby Talcum FREE with a purchase of a bottle of Mennen Baby Oil for 15c. Mennen Baby Oil is a sterilized blend of oils, properly medicated, pleasantly scented, and will not become rancid.

Don't fool yourself

Since halitosis never announces itself to the victim, you simply cannot know when you have it.

Before any "date" end halitosis

Before any engagement where you wish to appear at your best, decency demands that you rinse the mouth with full strength Listerine, the safe antiseptic.

By so doing you eliminate any risk of offending by halitosis (unpleasant breath). For Listerine overcomes bad breath instantly.

You never have halitosis? Don't fool yourself—you simply cannot know when you have it. It doesn't announce itself to the victim. But it does to others and offends them.

Being an active germicide capable of killing 200,000,000 germs in 15 seconds, full strength Listerine checks mouth fermentation and infection—both a cause of odors. Then it gets rid of the odors: it is an instant deodorant.

Keep a bottle handy in home and office and use it. It makes you agreeable to others instead of disagreeable. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

CITY WORK TO BRING JOB BOOM HERE

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

NO LESS than Secretary of Labor Davis contends that blondes are not always preferred. To prove his point, the secretary told a Hazlewood audience of labor and fraternal societies a story of a dispute which reached the Department of Labor.

"It seems the fad for attendants in beauty shops changed suddenly from blonde to brunette. A certain beauty shop fired its blondes and hired brunettes, and the blondes protested. Our department ruled for the brunettes."

Today is April Fool's Day, so to speak, but celebration of that day is not what it used to be. A few years ago the favorite pastime was to call up your best friend, represent yourself as the telephone company testing the line, and encourage your victim to adopt various postures at the 'phone. Another trick, practiced by katzenjammers, was to attach a string to an empty purse which was placed on the sidewalk to entice passers-by. As the pedestrian stooped to pick up the purse, the strng was pulled and the purse disappeared. These practices are considered old-fashioned today. The reason is probably Amos n'n Andy.

THE Buttermilk Club meets each noon in Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park's office and enjoys a lunch of buttermilk. Its members are District Attorney Gardner and his assistants, Park, Roy T. Clunk and Earle Jackson.—News item.

Park—Well, fellas, here we are again to do homage to the Great God Buttermilk.

Clunk—Three cheers for Buttermilk! All together!

Jackson—I say four cheers. Who'll give four cheers?

Gardner—Order, order. In the case of Re versus Ro, Dauphin County, 1886, the court clearly ruled that three and four make seven. It is the opinion of this court that we give seven cheers.

Clunk—Exception.

Gardner—Exceptin' what, Mr. Clunk?

Clunk—Exceptin' me. I'm very tired today.

Park—Gentlemen, are we here to drink buttermilk or argue?

Clunk—Let's argue. Now when I was at Franklin—

Gardner—I move that Mr. Clunk be tossed out of the club for conduct unbecoming an admirer of buttermilk.

Everybody—Aye, aye!

Park—So ordered! Clunk, out!

Jackson—Did you see that fella's chin?

Park—Gentlemen, now that order has been restored, I move that our colleague, Mr. Barney Cohen, be nominated to fill the place so politely vacated by the late Mr. Clunk.

Jackson (jumps to his feet)—If Barney Cohen is admitted to our club, I'll resign. Never, in all history, has there been such a malicious foe of buttermilk. What we are today we owe to buttermilk, and were we to admit Cohen we would have a spy in our midst.

Gardner—A spy? A spy for whom, pray?

Jackson—For the anti-buttermilk interests. If you doubt my word, look at the tariff on butter—

Park—The hour is late gentlemen, and we must to our buttermilk drinking get. Where is the buttermilk?

Chorus—I don't know.

Jackson—Clunk took it with him.

Park—Gentlemen, the meeting is adjourned for a lack of buttermilk.

MELVIA POULTER

Miss Poulter, who as "The Spirit of Progress" told the story of Dormont's growth as the pageant celebrating the borough's twenty-first birthday was unfolded yesterday in Harris South Hills Theater.

DORMONT FETE ENDS IN BALL

Citizens of Dormont today are congratulating themselves on the success of their celebration of the twenty-first anniversary of the borough's incorporation, which took place yesterday.

The jubilee closed last night with a ball in the Masonic Temple, West Liberty avenue, Dormont, which attracted hundreds of citizens of that community. Participating in the affair were the South Hills Council of Republican Women, sponsors of the event; New Century Club, of Dormont; Dormont Mothers' Club; New Century Auxiliary; Chartiers Valley Association; American Legion Auxiliary; The Almas Club; Dormont Rotary Club; Dormont Chamber of Commerce; Dormont Borough Council; Retail Merchants' Association of Dormont; Real Estate Board, and the Regular Republican Organization of Dormont. Findley Lake was the master of ceremonies.

The day's festivities started with an automobile parade through the principal streets of Dormont, followed by the coronation of "Queen" Kathleen Homer, in the Harris South Hills Theater, later followed by a historical pageant in the theater by Dormont school children.

Mrs. John S. Holliday, president of the South Hills Council of Republican Women, was the general chairman of the celebration.

Hearing Arranged On Plumbing Fee

An ordinance fixing fees for the installation of plumbing fixtures will be the subject of a hearing in Council tomorrow afternoon. The hearing was asked by representatives of the Real Estate Board and master plumbers.

WHITE HOUSE GANG

Gang Discovers Youthful Robbers at Work

Theodore Roosevelt, when President of the United States, started the adventurous, rollicking, joyous career of the White House Gang by sending his youngest son, Quentin, to the Force Public School in Washington. Here the gang was recruited. The accredited members are Charles (Taffy) Taft, "Brom" Seeley, Dick (Sailor) Chew, Edward (Slats) Stead, also called "Bedstead," Walker White, "T. R.," the most active member of the gang; Quentin, the leader, and Earle Looker, the author of this story.

Each day, after school, the gang went into a huddle to confound all rules of deportment in high places, mingle in the lives of presidents and policemen, win victories, taste honor, suffer punishments and engage in escapades which were swept along the wires to national publicity. Many exploits of the gang, however, either remain unknown or were known only to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Some there were securely hidden even from them.

CHAPTER XXIV.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT threw his head back and laughed aloud at Quentin's remark. Bramlett, a policeman standing at attention nearby, strove mightily to keep a straight face—and failed.

"Well, what do you propose to do now?" TR asked, changing the subject.

"Well, we had a plan in the cellar; but it's all spoiled now," Q said sadly.

"Guy Fawkes?" repeated Q, greatly intrigued by the name. "Who is he?"

The president halted. "Guy Fawkes," he said, "was the conspirator who tried, and nearly succeeded, in blowing up the British House of Lords and the King, by mining the cellar. It was called the Gunpowder Plot, and happened in 1600"—he thought a moment—"sixteen hundred and four. Find out what king reigned in England at the time and why it was that Fawkes said part of the plan was to 'blow' the Scots back into Scotland!'"

Informative
Explains Many Things To the Gang

Perceiving that he had said enough to start historical research, TR added, "Please let me know if you discover—as you will—other interesting matters relating to Guy Fawkes . . ." and walked vigorously away to meet the delegation and face the camera.

Whereupon Q indulged in one of his unusual expressions. "Father," he said, "is simply a mine of information. If he had the time, he could tell us a lot of things we'd like to know. But even as it is, I think he does pretty well—" It was not difficult to determine from whence came many of Q's quaint, unusual words. Quentin Roosevelt was his father's son!

Consider the busy men we know, today. To think of one capable of holding a position at all comparable to TR's, one must select the actively executive head of some very large corporation. Having selected him, one must determine whether this man is accurately conversant with a thousand and one historical, literary, scientific, anthropological and ethnological facts which lie outside his own particular province of activity. Then he must ask if this man of affairs would consider it profitable or important enough, to devote time in the midst of a closely-packed schedule, to impart to several disheveled little boys enough initiative in the direction of further knowledge? One must remember, too, that this must be done with an instantaneous appreciation of the parallels proper for the precise moment without which, the information would be academic and lifeless. . . . When one has considered all this, he has glanced upon one fact of the great character that was Theodore Roosevelt.

Consult Books
Disarranged Clothing Is Source of Amusement

So do all great men, unconscious of their greatness or that they are meeting the age-old test for great souls, halt for children. It is told of Washington that he so halted, for a 10-year-old boy, when the related circumstances would have occasioned nothing but annoyance for a smaller man. Sam Hay, son of Col. A. H. Hay of Haverstraw, fired a toy-cannon, charged to the brim, properly to salute the general. Washington's horse reared and plunged, and the general was very nearly unseated. He steadied himself, however, and, instead of reprimanding young Hay, thanked him for the compliment, dismounted, and wrote out, for the boy, an order upon the Ordnance Department, for one pound of powder expended.

Having been halted by TR and by him having had its energy re-directed, the Gang, led by Q, tu ned back into the White House, and made for the President's study, where works of reference and histories were known to be housed. First, however, under Q's orders, we washed and scrubbed our hands, and passed his lose scrutiny. Dick and I had to return to the bathroom for a more vigorous use of the scrubbing-brush, before we were permitted to turn the pages of research.

Meanwhile, Q already completely absorbed, reached into his hip-pocket for a handkerchief and not catching hold of it, jerked out, instead, the tail of his shirt. A moment later he secured the handkerchief, but proceeded to no rearrangement of his undergarment, and so went about most of the afternoon in this unconventional manner. Of course, there was a silent but effective conspiracy on the part of the Gang to do nothing in the way of enlightenment. Far indeed, was it from that bunch, on such an occasion, to do any butting-in on a man's private business or affairs.

Cromwell
Liked and Disliked by The President

In the course of digging out the Gunpowder Plot, Q ran across some mention of Oliver Cromwell, and I took us across the room to the window there to show us an original autograph order which hung framed upon the wall.

"Father says," Q explained, "that scrap of paper is the most valuable thing in the house, except Mother. . . . Father wrote a book about Oliver. He says he was a very great man and that he hates him for some things, and loves him for others. He says, too, that's one way you know when a man is great—when everything is all mixed up, in 'im, and about him. . . ."

Perhaps Q exaggerated about the order; there must, however, have been some basis of fact for his remark. TR and Cromwell had much in common; certainly both are permanently written into history as strong rulers; the sense of the Gang, however—fostered by certain desultory incursions into history—was, that both were game, the highest virtue either for gang or national leadership.

This quality, always and utterly dependable in Quentin, overcame all hesitation the Gang might have had in following him, when we found ourselves standing on the threshold of important events.

One of these moments came one Saturday afternoon, when our bicycle-cruising took us over on the other side of the State-War-Navy Building. Here, on G street, and near the Y. M. C. A. Building, was a house

$23,000 THEFT CHARGED AS 'INSIDE' JOB

Plant Owner, Two Others Held in Clothes Robbery; Confession Is Claimed

The $23,000 robbery of clothes from the Washington Cleaning and Dyeing plant in Washington boulevard, for which six men have been arrested, was "an inside job," city detectives contended today as they arrested three more.

The three were—an owner of the plant, M. Levine, of 6329 Alderson street; Herman Helm, of 6600 Frankstown avenue, and Joseph Rubrecht, of Linoleum way, both former employes.

CLAIMS CONFESSION

Detectives claimed Helm and Rubrecht have admitted they were in the plant during the robbery, that they were threatened with death if they gave police any clues. Rubrecht, the watchman, at the time of the robbery last October, said he was bound and gagged.

The three were arraigned in Central Police Court today and held for investigation. Levine contended he knew nothing of the robbery.

TWO OTHERS HELD

The others being held include Ben Needleman, 28, of Avalon street, and Joseph Cushner, 40, of Philadelphia. Needleman has told of witnessing the robbery and of himself taking the loot from a garage in Juliet street after watching the robbers store the the stuff there.

Cushner testified he bought the clothes from Needleman, although he didn't know they had been stolen.

Detectives recovered the loot in Monessen last Friday, when employes of Cushner were about to drive to Philadelphia with it.

LANG SLATES ACTION ON PROJECTS

Boulevard Extension Among Many Street Plans Listed; Road Cleaners Rehired

Paydays for many men who need them will be the result of an extensive city construction program sent to Council by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang.

Some of the projects can be begun almost immediately, while others are as yet in their preparatory stages. The list is composed of street and sewer work.

One of the most important projects is a continuation of the Boulevard of the Allies as originally planned. It is an ordinance providing for the grading, paving and curbing of the boulevard from Halket street to Parkview avenue, with resulting changes on Bates, Juliet and Welsford streets. The total cost is estimated at $140,000.

WOULD ADVERTISE BIDS

Director Lang also asked authority to advertise for bids on three streets included in the repaving schedule. These are Eleanor from Arlington to Salisbury, Manton way from Arlington to Armand, and Fifth avenue extension from Hamilton to Frankstown avenues. The total cost is estimated at $36,000.

Another ordinance would provide for the opening of California avenue, Twenty-first Ward, to cut off a bad angle at Sedgwick street. This calls for a new street paralleling the Pennsylvania Railroad from the start of the angle to Sedgwick street at Columbus avenue. The last-named thoroughfare ultimately will be the extension of the Ohio River boulevard and the improvement is part of that general plan. Property damages have been estimated at $61,240.

The widening of Whitfield street between Broad and Rural streets from 20 to 40 feet also is asked. Damages are placed at $65,000. Whitfield street from Penn avenue to Broad street already is 40 feet wide.

"WHITE WINGS" GET JOBS

The grading and paving of Essen street, one of the approaches to the new East Street Bridge, is asked in another ordinance. The total cost will be $24,500, of which the city will pay $18,000.

The Bureau of Water asked that $70,000 be transferred from bond funds for various sewer construction projects and for $1,800 for the lowering of water mains on Apple street between Montezuma street and Lincoln avenue. The same bureau requested $20,000 for a pitometer survey of South Side mains to detect water losses. Of this amount $8,000 will be spent by the bureau and $12,000 for the employment of a pitometer company. Thousands of dollars have been saved since the survey was started on Herron Hill and continued to the North Side, the bureau reports.

Approximately 200 "white wings," dropped a few weeks ago, will go back to work on a five-day week basis, Director Lang said yesterday. Open weather demands more laborers, he said, adding that in addition the city wishes to do its share in making "Clean-up Week" a success.

10TH ST. BRIDGE START SLATED

At the same time interested parties here gave unanimous approval for the construction of the Tenth Street Bridge across the Monongahela River, Congressman Harry Estep introduced a bill in Washington yesterday, which would extend the time for commencing and completing construction of the bridge one and three years respectively.

Interested parties here met in the Federal Building where Col. Jarvis J. Bain, United States district engineer, conducted a hearing. V. R. Covell, chief engineer of the County Department of Public Works, said that work on the span would be started this summer. The bridge is to be of the cable suspension type.

DRIVER KILLED IN CAR UPSET

One man was killed and three children were in hospitals today, victims of automobile accidents last night.

Frank Leibold, 40, of Gibsonia, was killed and James Goulding, 29, of Bethel Township, was injured when their automobile overturned while rounding a curve in Saw Mill Run boulevard, near McKinley Park. Leibold was chief clerk in the personal property department of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes. He also was a brother-in-law of Dr. F. H. Frederick, president of the City Civil Service Commission.

Suffering a probable fracture of the skull when she was struck by an automobile at California and Superior avenues, Shirley Cotton, 7, of 1614 Superior avenue, was taken to St. John's Hospital. Wren H. Gates, 40, of 710 Locust place, Sewickley, driver of the car, took her to the hospital.

Harriet Skszycki, 5, of 3553 Beethoven street, was in St. Francis Hospital with a probable skull fracture, suffered last night when she was struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Archer Todd, 19, of 3805 Fleetwood street. Todd was arrested.

Struck by an automobile at California and Davis avenues, Alex Spec, 8, of 3148 Mt. Hope road, sustained a possible fractured skull and was taken to St. John's Hospital by J. G. McCammon, the driver, of 167 Lincoln avenue, Emsworth, according to police.

Truck Driver Hurt In Downtown Crash

Simone, Italian Sculptor, To Hold Exhibit Here

By PENELOPE REDD

Edgardo Simone, with vivid gesture, outlined yesterday the concentrated career that has made him one of Italy's most eminent sculptors at 40.

Penelope Redd.

Identified as one of the commemorators of the Fascisti movement in his bas-reliefs celebrating the march on Rome and by his portrait of Mussolini, Simone projects the eternal charm of the Italian personality galvanized by the Fascisti conviction of power.

Disregarding the wishes of his family, who were renowned as physicians and engineers in the Province of Brindisi, Simone surreptitiously commenced to model. He won a scholarship for the Fine Arts Academy in Rome when 18.

It was not until his monument to the Alpine troops at Verona was unveiled by the king himself, that Edgardo won his father's forgiveness for his choice of so "wayward and Bohemian" a profession as sculpture.

For the monument at Verona, Edgardo Simone received his third decoration, conferred personally by King Victor Emmanuel, who then made him a Commander of the Crown of Italy.

Simone designed 15 other war memorials in Italy, as well as 10 in other countries, one of which is installed at Tampa, Fla. All of these memorials were alike won against a hundred and sometimes more sculptors in competition.

Edgardo Simone has just closed his special exhibition at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, where his recently completed busts of Associate Justices Oliver Wendell Holmes and Harlan Fiske Stone, of the Supreme Court, together with portraits of General Pershing, Sir Esme Howard, George Wickersham and Secretary Hurley, were received with acclaim.

These and many other of Simone's sculptures will be exhibited at Grogan's for a period of two weeks, commencing on May 12.

Alleged 'Numbers' Bookie Robbed of Auto, $3,000

William Snyder, Negro, alleged "numbers" bookie, of Anaheim street, and reputed to be one of the "big three" bookies in the Hill district, today was minus $3,000 and his automobile which was stolen from him last night.

Two men greeted him as he stepped from the automobile in front of his home and ordered him to get into the car. In the course of a two-mile ride they took cash from him at the point of revolvers, he reported to police. After taking the money, the thugs ordered Snyder to get out of the machine, and sped away.

Although police said Snyder was a "numbers" writer, he denied this. He said he was a plasterer and a "good" one, too.

Snyder said he fooled the robbers by turning a $2,000 diamond ring around his finger, so they couldn't see the stone glitter when he held up his hands.

Will Rogers Says:

BEVERLY HILLS, CAL., April 1.

HERE is the advance copy of what Mr. Hoover will say over the phone Thursday to the Presidents of Argentine, Chili and Uruguay.

"Brother Presidents, you are lucky to preside over a land where there is no Pennsylvania to make your tariff, where sugar is a commodity and not an issue, where your manufacturers and your farmers are so primitive that they think their relief has to come from their own efforts and not from their president; where your countries are not prominent enough to have refugees stranded at foreign conferences and, lastly, brothers, if the prohibition issue ever comes up during your term, resign quick in favor of your worst enemy.

"Boys I am telling you a mouthful.

"H. H."

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: "A married man cannot be a gentleman unless he is henpecked," contends E. W. Howe in an article on domestic relations in the "Forum." What is your opinion of his judgment?

MAE R. BUMILLER, North Side, stenographer: "There are so few real gentlemen occupying this earth today that it would be a shame to completely demolish their ranks by telling them that they had to be ladies-in-waiting to their fraus before they could lay claim to the title of gentleman. Let the boys rip things up once in a while and be gentlemen."

Mae R. Bumiller

ANNE BUMILLER, North Side, secretary: "No man can leap to put the cat out, do the dishes, quit smoking in the house, clean the rugs, fetch his wife from a bridge party and all the little "acts of kindness" and still be a gentleman. Any woman who henpecks her husband is a fool. Mr. Howe has just made a little error—we all do, you know."

Anne Bumiller

HARRY HARRISON, East End, assessor: "No woman admires a man who caters to her every whim because of his fear of her. A husband can be a gentleman without being henpecked, as Howe put it. There are women in this world who like to see how much they can browbeat a man before he turns the well-known tables. "Give the table a turn and be a gentleman" is my motto."

Harry Harrison

OTTO HAUDENSHIELD, East End: "In my opinion a married man can't be a gentleman if he is henpecked. This may be the opposite of Mr. Howe's views, but it is my honest opinion. Any man who stands in fear of his wife and is dictated to by her is a poor example of the stronger sex. Free, white and 21 should stand in marriage in order for a man to retain his self respect."

O. Haudenshield

ALBERT E. MAMAUX, Oakland, assessor: "Any married man can be a gentleman without being henpecked regardless of what Mr. Howe or any other man says. I know I'm not henpecked and do not think I have too much ego when I say I'm a gentleman. Any man, married or otherwise, should assert himself when he knows he's right. Of course, he does not have to be insulting to a woman."

A. E. Mamaux

CHARLES YOUNG, North Side: "A man must gain a lot of accomplishments and satisfy many requirements before he is admitted into the category of gentleman. Why heap greater weight to the heavy load by saying to the married man "be henpecked and then you'll be a gentleman." Mr. Howe was a little excited when he made such a statement."

NEED OF WOMEN'S AID IN CENSUS CAMPAIGN STRESSED

WORKERS SET TO OPEN DRIVE TOMORROW

Accuracy Depends on Help Of Housewives in Replies To Quiz, Supervisor Says

The accuracy of the fifteenth decennial census depends upon the co-operation of the American housewife with Uncle Sam's enumerators who tomorrow will begin their labors, James E. Routley, chief supervisor for Allegheny County, pointed out that in more than 75 per cent of the calls by the enumerators the heads of families would be absent at work and that the matter of answering questions would devolve upon the wife or mother.

"Women are alert," said Routley, "and their intuition will stand them in good stead in replying to the census-takers. Seriously, I believe they will do better than the men. Women can recall the names and ages of their children better than men and the most of them know all about the property values, occupations and other questions which will be asked."

A large percentage of the enumerators in Allegheny County will be women. For several days they have been making an intensive study of their jobs.

PUPILS TO RAISE SILK WORMS

Boys and girls who attend sessions of the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday school punctually for the next several weeks have ample chance to develop into silk worm "farmers."

Archie J. Holman, secretary of the school, and a silk worm fancier, has announced prizes of 10 silk worm eggs to each faithful in attendance. With this array of material cocoons can be made and silk developed.

Raising of worms is not difficult in this climate, according to Holman. All that is needed, he says, is a cigar box, some mulberry leaves, a little patience and a warm room. The worms do the rest.

Holman learned his silk worms when a boy in London. Ever since since he has bred and raised them.

CIVIC GROWTH PLAN OUTLINED

Francis H. Bird, professor of commerce at the University of Cincinnati, advocated stabilization of business and industry as the means to promote sound and progressive community growth, in an address before a group of manufacturers, industrials and social workers in the Chamber of Commerce. The group met to study industrial problems here. The speaker was introduced by President James Rae of the chamber, who presided.

Prof. Bird declared the stabilization plan has been put into effect in Cincinnati and the unemployment situation has been relieved. The conference yesterday was the first of a series to be held with the view of working out a definite plan here similar to that in Cincinnati. The research and statistics committee of the chamber brought Prof. Bird here.

STAIR CLIMBING CO-EDS LOSE

Five Pitt co-eds gathered at the bottom of the stairs leading to the top of the Cathedral of Learning. Gritting their teeth, they determined that no man was going to hang up a record for climbing to the top faster than they. They'd show Bud Post, watchman at the Cathedral, that his record of 6¾ minutes was only a man's record, and slow for women.

So Alice Eibeck, Alice Walton, Lucille Glenn, Alice Keffer and Gretchen Brooks started for the top. All are students at the College of Physical Education.

At the fourth floor they were panting.

At the sixth floor they were out of breath.

At the fourteenth floor they were exhausted, but still determined.

And at the thirty-eighth floor they sat down, flushed and tired. They asked for the time.

It had taken them 12 minutes to reach the top. Beaten? No. They would try again, some time.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Varied Garb Worn to Nixon

LAST night was theater night in Pittsburgh with the Nixon having its opening of "Strange Interlude" and the Alvin having its revival of "The Merry Widow." And everyone went to one theater or to the other, and at the Nixon some came in street clothes, some in afternoon costumes, and some in velvet gowns.

The Nixon opening at 5:30 o'clock was the cause of the variety of costumes. Most of Pittsburgh's society folks wore simple, dark crepe gowns and snug felt hats, I noticed, and I might add that when some came back from dinner intermission they left their hats behind them, having found out that holding a chapeau throughout a long play is rather a nuisance.

At the Alvin the theater-goers were unperplexed as to what to wear. And with the Elizabeth Close bridal party there and a number of other important folks the Alvin audience looked very smart.

NOT until the acts following the dinner intermissions was the time between the fall and rise of the curtain long enough to permit folks to go to the foyer for a cigaret and a chat.

Simple Gowns

During the first long intermission I caught sight of the Reginald Macdonalds and Mrs. Macdonald was wearing a deep plum-colored crepe gown and a black felt hat cut with a narrow brim in the front. Chatting with her was Mrs. J. Shirley Austin looking charming in a simple navy blue crepe dress, made with fashion's most recent revival short sleeves.

A distinctive afternoon gown of vivid green and gold motifs on a black background, made in a style suggestive of Russian influence, was worn by Mrs. T. M. Jones III. A flowered motif on a black background formed Mrs. Reginald G. Quaill's spring-like gown, with narrow lace outlining the neck-line and the short sleeves. Her hat was of shiny black straw.

Felt Hats

The Simon T. Pattersons were in the first row, as usual, with Mrs. Patterson wearing a flowered print gown with a cape collar forming brief sleeves.

Other first nighters I noticed were the William A. Duckhams, with Mrs. Duckham wearing a long gown of gold metal cloth, and the Felix B. Snowdons. Mrs. Snowdon was in Paddy green crepe with a green felt hat to complete her costume.

American beauty red crepe was worn by Mrs. James Edward Lewis, with a black felt hat completing her costume, and I believe I caught sight of her son-in-law and daughter, the junior Christian Mays, talking with her. Mrs. May was in blue crepe with a smart peplum adding to the charm of the frock.

Theater Party

Others I noticed were Helen Donnelly, Mrs. W. W. Blair, Mrs. Joseph M. Scribner, who wore black crepe; and Mrs. Alexander Laughlin Robinson, who chose black crepe, too.

Wearing peach chiffon was Mrs. Alfred P. Brill. Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Edmondson, and Mrs. William Frew, Mrs. Clark Miller, Mrs. William R. Jarvis and Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson.

Chatting in the lobby I noticed Suzanne Trimble, who wore a simple afternoon frock of black crepe; Mrs. George P. Bassett, Jr., and Miss Suzanne Beatty.

THE Alvin attracted quite a few people inclined to drama and music to see "The Merry Widow." I saw Mary Childs there, and with her was Mrs. Charles B. Jerrett, who was wearing a long black crepe gown, longer in the back, and her wrap of black velvet had a collar of sable. Mary Childs wore black chiffon, with a low v-decolletage, and with the long bouffant skirt formed of tiers of tiny ruffles. She wore a coat of black broadtail having collar and cuffs of mink.

Many Attend

And there was a theater party for Mary Elizabeth Close, daughter of the Clifton Henry Closes, of Beechwood boulevard, whose marriage to Harrison Farnsworth Gleason, Jr., son of the Harrison Farnsworth Gleasons, of Aylesboro avenue, will be an event of Friday evening. The ceremony, you know, is to take place at 5:30 o'clock in St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church.

MARY ELIZABETH was wearing an attractive gown of fleet blue taffeta, with a long bouffant skirt, having scallops outlining the hemline. The members of the bridal party, of course, made up the others of the group. Margaret Jane Petty was wearing flowered white taffeta with a flounce of heliotrope tulle banding the skirt, and with her was Elizabeth Ganter Close, wearing a gown of tangerine crepe and her wrap was of silver metallic cloth embroidered in Pirate blue. Mrs. Samuel Heppenstal was with them, too, wearing a charming gown of coral chiffon, and a wrap of black and gold brocade.

Chinese Princess to Be Speaker Monday at Sewickley Club

INSTEAD of the scheduled lecture by William Seabrook Monday, the Sewickley Valley Woman's Club will hear her Imperial Highness Princess Der Ling, of the Manchu Court of the Late Empress Dowager Tzu Hsi of China. This will be the last meeting in the Sewickley Theater, for the senior play on the fourteenth will be given at night in Sewickley Academy and the annual meeting, closing the year on the twenty-first, will be in the Dorian Club.

Paul Goodwin Reddington, chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, Washington, and president of the Society of American Foresters, addressed the club yesterday, giving what he termed "a brief sizeup" of the bureau's work. Incidentally, he paid a very fine tribute to Pennsylvania for its forest and game conservation work, which, he said, is equaled by no other state.

Organized in 1886 primarily as a research organization, the bureau's work has extended in many directions, and has been concerned largely with the protection of feathered and furred life. Control of coyotes and other animals inimical to stock and bird life has been accomplished and through a treaty between Great Britain and the United States the migratory birds between Canada and this country have become the wards of the nation. Breeding, resting and feeding grounds of birds are now protected and much valuable information concerning birds has been collected, such as the distance and direction of their flights. In determining what birds eat, the stomach contents of 8,000 sparrows was examined, Mr. Reddington said.

The interesting and unusual film taken on the Carpenter-Whitney Alaska expedition (of which Mr. Reddington was a member) under auspices of the Academy of Natural Science, was shown, the picture giving views of the animals and scenery of the 2,000-mile trip through the rugged mountainous interior of the country. Yesterday's was only the second public showing, the first having been at Carnegie Institute on Sunday.

After the meeting yesterday Mrs. Marcus Woodward Stoner, president of the club, entertained informally at tea for Mr. Reddington.

NATIONAL security is the paramount issue in every nation today, Ida Wright Bowman told her audience at the Twentieth Century Club yesterday morning. Mrs. Bowman was discussing the London arms conference, showing how national security and not economics or fighting strength is the reason behind the demands of the various nations. Mrs. Bowman recalled that no generation of Frenchmen for 1,000 years had gone to its grave without having seen the country involved in war. She commented on the change in the present conference from its first few weeks of discussion of machinery for war to its present discussion of the machinery for peace.

Century Lecture

It was not an unarmed world that brought about the catastrophe of 1918, it was the Europe that had been arming contemplatively for 10 years that got what it had been preparing for, she said, remarking that the completely amazing thing and the encouraging thing is that the nations are actually considering disarmament. Those who are expecting a great reduction in arms as a result of the conference will be disappointed, she went on. What probably will come is a five-year holiday in capital shipbuilding and at the end of that time capital ships will have abolished themselves.

"It is reasonable," Mrs. Bowman pointed out, "that the other nations should want to know where the United States stands if there is a new threat against the peace of the world and it is necessary for us to make clear to all the world that we are not going to be bound by any pledge to use military force but that we are willing to consult and confer. If that is entanglement, let us be entangled. It is better to be entangled in peace than to be entangled in war."

Continuing she said, there has always been an urge forward in civilization, as the student of history can see, and an opportunity is here for humanity to take the next great forward step. The two nations that stand out with challenging systems are the United States and Soviet Russia. Russia has, in her upheaval, created something new and only history can tell how much of it will be enduring. Mrs. Bowman emphatically advocated counteracting communism, rather than fighting, suppressing, smashing or crushing it—counteracting it by removing the soil in which it can take root, such soil as comes from the hunger, despondency and desperation of unemployment and other inequalities and injustices of even the most favored nation in the world—America.

BEGINNING this week with James Steel Gow's talk on "Co-Educational Colleges of the Middle West," the Friday afternoon lectures of the College Club will introduce a variety of interesting topics for this month. Dr. Gow's talk is the second in the series on "Colleges Today," the first of which was given by Dr. Robert DeVore Leigh early last month and the last of which will be given in May.

College Club

Mrs. Carroll Miller will speak April 11 on "The Age of Intolerance," and the following week Mrs. Charles H. Spencer, a valued member of long standing, and Miss Mary Louise Succop, one of the very newest members, will be the speakers. Mrs. Spencer is to discuss the "Cause and Cure of War Conference," which she attended and Miss Succop will give her views of "International Relations as Seen by a Student in Geneva." Miss Succop spent six weeks in Geneva last summer as holder of a scholarship given by the Students' International Union.

"Population Pressure and World Peace" is the subject announced for the last Friday of the month and Dr. Ivan E. McDougle, associate professor of economics and sociology at Goucher College, is the speaker. Dr. McDougle, who is lecturing on sociology at William and Mary College, will treat his subject from a sociological point of view rather than from the more usual ones of history and politics.

A bridge luncheon next Monday and a buffet supper and bridge on April 26 are the social events listed for the month. Among the readers' groups there will be an address entitled "Me," by William Morrell, of the University of Pittsburgh, next Tuesday afternoon, and "The English Drama to Hamlet," this evening. Due to illness, Miss Harriet Sawyer, executive secretary of the Associate Alumni of Vassar College, has canceled all speaking engagements for this month and the luncheon scheduled for April 15 will, therefore, not be held.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S efforts for naval reduction were voted support Saturday at a meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Committee on the Cause and Cure of War. Word to that effect was sent to Mr. Hoover together with the committee's indorsement of consultative agreement without military sanctions in line with the general pact for renunciation of war. The committee also sent a cablegram to Secretary Stimson in London, carrying the same indorsement, a message to William Randolph Hearst, protesting the attitude of the Hearst press, and one to Senator William E. Borah which reads: "We consider it a pious fraud to sign an agreement for the renunciation of war and to be unwilling to even confer in case of threatened war."

Efforts Indorsed

The messages were signed by Charles H. Spencer of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. George G. Bray, Women's International League for Peace; Mrs. Sidney Kaufman, Council of Jewish Women; Miss Betty Lee, Association of University Women; Mrs. David Alter, League of Women Voters; Mrs. W. H. Sturgeon, Women's Department, Council of Churches; Mrs. Joseph Kunkel, Catholic Forum; Mrs. S. R. B. Stewart, Women's Christian Temperance Union; Mrs. Frederick Johnston, Temple Sisterhoods; Mrs. Stephen Q. Hays, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; Mrs. R. W. Johnston, Congress of Clubs, and Mrs. A. H. Bowman, Cause and Cure of War Committee.

TRIMMING EFFECTS IMPORTANT FOR NEWEST SPRING GARMENTS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 1.—Trimming is using intricate methods to decorate the spring mode. In the hands of eminent couturiers here ornamentation has achieved the distinction of being effectively detailed and at once artfully simple. Hand drawn work, embroidery, fagoting, lace and self fabric bands and bows are all used with use discrimination and restraint that even the most fastidious is bereft of a claim that the fashions of today are "too dressy." The results noted here are confined to captivating touches of dainty femininity, imposed upon model of smart sophistication. Sport frocks are often embellished by horizontal rows of hand drawn-work, linen blouses show a predelection for fagoting while lace and embroidered bastiste are frequently used in combination on all types of day time frocks. Scalloped edges are popular means of finishing collars and peplums of semi-tailored garments.

A MANNER of manipulating fabrics to form its own trimming is illustrated in the frock shown here, which was a feature of Chantal's new collection. The dress is part of a chic ensemble and is developed of printed crepe de Chine in stripes of alternating brown and yellow. The blouse and upper part of the skirt are formed by intricate piecings, the same work being found also on the cuff. By using the striped fabric in opposing diagonals for these piecings an original and interesting effect is obtained.

COMPLETING the ensemble is the coat of soft brown velours Leda with a collar of striped crepe de Chine matching the frock. The attachment of the circular cape is unusual and interesting and the circular movement is repeated in the lower half of the garment. The sleeves are straight and untrimmed.

CHICKIE

CHAPTER XLVIII.

SHE moved toward him in a dream. In the wonder of his coming she felt lifted from the earth to a world of living radiance. It was so that night and the next day.

He said with a boy's breathless eagerness, "You're not angry, Chickie? Listen—I had to come. Only for a day. Oh—you won't mind that?"

She gave a little wild laugh and wouldn't let him see her face nor the wetness in her eyes. She whispered only, "No. I'm glad you came. Tell me now."

For it was true. He was going to New Orleans. Moore had wired him to come as casually as though it were a trip across the street. He would stay in the South a few days. The appointment might be settled.

"So I had to tell you that, Chickie. It's all right, isn't it?"

"Yes—if it's only true now—you think it is, Barry?"

"We won't count on it too much. We don't want to do that again, do we?"

But they counted on it. They faced each other, trembling in the dark, they whispered. Perhaps! Oh, it's sure to be now. It has to be—

They had a day—the whole of the next day for the dream. They lay on the sands along the beach and talking of this glowing future that might soon be theirs, they were drawn in a closeness so poignant it was almost pain. He looked up at her and smiled. He could have wept with joy. He touched her hand. It shot her veins with fire.

Then he said, seeking her eyes: "Chickie, do you feel bound to me?"

Masking her eagerness, she asked artlessly, "Why, what do you mean? Do I owe you anything, kind sir?"

"You do, indeed. But answer this: Could you have let me go?"

"Could you have gone?"

"I seem to be here, don't I? Kicked out on my face and back again! No—I couldn't have gone. I don't want to—"

Talk of Love

She laughed to hide a shouting exultance: "But I hear tell as how the South is full of lures for callow youth and you may forget the fair one. You may go and come again no more."

He said quietly, "I tried to do that, Chickie. You seem to have something of me that I can't take back. I wish—"

"What—"

"Nothing—" But a flush dashed to his temples. He went on rapidly: "That you loved me more than anything on earth—"

She stopped him. "I think I do."

They talked like this for hours—lying in the sun. They poured out this golden wine and made a chalice of each other's hearts.

When it came evening and she stood at the little wooden shelf that served for a bureau in the crude room she dressed as though kings were to see her. She looked into the stained, clouded mirror and laughed, saying with a lilt: "Well—yolk of an egg, shall you outshine the sun? Not if Helena Bryce can help it!" She put perfume behind her ears and a few lavish drops on her hair.

When she ran down to meet him on the path his breath caught. He said, teasingly, "Wimmin is wicked."

They went down to the beach. He held her hand. "Only a few hours more, Chickie." But when she wiped her eyes he added: "What a sorry loveress you are!"

"But you'll soon be going, Barry."

"It may not be for long, Chickie."

"What do you mean by that? Aren't you sure—very sure?"

He laughed. "Does one ever know, Chickie? We only have this hour for our own. Suppose the train goes dashing off the track—"

Would Die for Him

"No—don't! Oh! I dreamed of a thing like that." She tightened her fingers on his hand.

It was late, but no moon traversing the inky sky. A thousand stars strewed with faint diamonds the dark breast of the water. Up and down the water was no sound but a gentle lap-lap against the shore; no motion but a fish leaping in the air.

He whispered, bending down against her ear: "Black, isn't it? Are you afraid?"

No. It only makes you the braver.

"You feel like that, Chickie? You want me near?"

Hush—oh, Barry, let's not say a word, nothing. This is like a dream, isn't it? I feel so."

He slid the canoe into the creek. His paddle struck the water. Sitting at the bottom of the boat, she rested against him. They went down the shore, skirting close to the willows. Shadows from overhanging banks and shrubs massed in a still dark closing about them.

It seemed to her that they two were moving from the world into this vast, eternal silence and there was no sound but the thunder of her heart. Now and then he let the boat drift. He stooped and kissed her. She felt it more than she could bear.

Absently, she murmured: "Barry, I feel as though you and I were going far away together. Oh, I hate to let you go alone. I wish this night would last and last."

He ran his hand along her shoulder. She felt it shake and turned her cheek against his palm. He said, quickened: "Would love me enough for that, Chickie? To go away with me?"

"To die for you."

Discuss Last Hour

A short, rough sound, half laugh: "You mean that?" Chickie, if this was our last hour, oh, suppose you'd care enough for all would you?"

Oh—

"Tell me."

The boat rested in a cove between two rocks. Across from them a small islet, like a little black world alone. They saw it—dim, imperturbable, heavy with shrubs.

Now, because her heart flushed wildly, she murmured: "And that little islet was out in the ocean and only you and I in all the world?"

"Yes! Would you care enough then?"

Words, tumult, eagerness rushed to her lips. She tried to laugh: "Oh, you mean if we were dying and the world coming to an end and every one else all gone——"

"Oh, tell me——" He took her head in his hands and drew it back against his knees. He stooped and whispered on her mouth: "Chickie, our last hour, if it were? It may be. Who knows? Would you then?"

She felt rather than saw the hotness in his face. She reached up with a faint cry and touched his face. She pleaded softly: "Barry—don't—oh—if that were so——"

Boat Grounded

But he pressed her face and laughed: "You would! Oh, say it! I love you enough for that, Chickie. And you? I'm bound to you. Nothing can draw us closer. You know. Four days of torture. I feel a thousand ties. I want to feel them. All today they drew me."

Flame came from his eyes and burned her heart. She said excitedly: "Oh, really? I felt that, too—oh—what are you doing—stop—"

The boat shot out, went flying, jarred against the islet, scraping the sand. She cowered against his knees, gave a sharp, frightened cry: "Barry, you'll drown us both—oh, stop—"

His hands gripped her shoulders, ran down and held her arms. He whispered hoarsely: "Chickie—"

Her heart melted. A warm, heavy dew, intoxicating and oppressive, fell about her. She sat motionless, protesting, as he swung himself out on the rock, reached for her hand.

All through her went cruelly a terrifying shiver that ended in a clutch of anguish at her throat. Almost in a swoon she heard herself saying: "No—that's steep—"

Within her another voice clamored, insistent, urgent: "No! Stay back. You don't have to go! Say no!—now!"

But he was reaching down and lifting her. He was holding out his hand. She clung to it. She followed him.

Beware of the Man Who Prefers the Married Flirt, Fay King Warns

SHE BEGINS TO THINK OF LEAVING HER HUSBAND!
HE DOESN'T APPRECIATE YOU. GEE! IF YOU WERE MY WIFE
BUT WHEN SHE HAS GOT HER DIVORCE SHE FINDS THE OTHER MAN HAS SOME EXCUSE FOR NOT MARRYING HER
FAY KING

By FAY KING

A FOOLISH wife should not put too much faith in a selfish bachelor who presents a few flowers and candy, and declares he never married because he didn't meet a girl just like her.

He infers that her husband does not appreciate her. He insinuates he would be her slave.

But if she divorces her husband, she is apt to find her bachelor friend has changed his line entirely, and the last thing he is thinking of is marriage.

In nine cases out of ten, these men who rush into romance run from responsibility.

It costs less to pay compliments than to pay grocery bills.

Junior Completes Fanciful Tale of "Pirate Invasion"

JUNIOR'S eyes bright with the hectic excitement of the story of his adventures which he was telling me, suddenly shot a queer, enigmatic glance at me.

"The man that had me was Captain Flint himself. I guess, and the other one was John Silver. That was the reason Flint grabbed me and held me in front of him, so Silver could get away. You know he has only one leg. They told Grandfather they'd take me away with them if he didn't bring out all the money he had in the treasure chest, and Grandfather went into a closet that you don't know about, Mums. It has a secret panel, and he brought out bags and bags of gold, and then the pirates went downstairs, where they'd left some of their men, and they got into a fight over the bags of gold, and they killed each other, something awful. When they finally went away, after they'd told me to cut away back to my grandfather, they kept their word, you see. Jim and I had to drag four dead men away and bury them behind the barn. And the place downstairs is awful. I guess Aunt Katherine brought you up the front stairs so you didn't see it."

Yes. I came up the front stairs," I said, my mind and heart caught in that ever-present problem of motherhood—the disciplining of one's children. Common sense told me that Junior was getting too old either to let his imagination run riot in full belief of such a farrago of nonsense as he had just related, or to employ the conscious pretense which was the only other explanation of the story.

"Mums?"

"Yes, dear." I answered, resisting the inclination to turn my eyes toward him. Instinctively I felt that it would be better not to meet his for the next minute or two.

"Did you believe that story I just told you?"

"Why do you ask me that, dearest?" I countered. "Do you expect me to believe it? Is it all true, or is part of it like a story you know, as if you were writing a story the way Mr. Stevenson did 'Treasure Island'?"

There was another silence, and then a torrent of words.

"There's only a little of it true, but, honest, I didn't mean to tell a lie about it. I'd been dreaming about Treasure Island, and when the shot waked me up I was sure pirates had come. And then some way I found that if I could pretend they were pirates I wouldn't be afraid—and I didn't want to be a coward, and I was awful afraid I was going to be, so I pretended pirates just as hard as I could. But, of course, I knew better all the time, way down inside me. But I never let that way down inside come up till just now. And now I've got to tell you. There wasn't a word true about the pirates. The burglar did grab me and hold me till the other man got downstairs, and they made Grandfather promise he would not say anything to the police for an hour if they'd let me go. But all the rest I—I—made up. Are you terrible mad?"

His arms went around my neck again in a convulsive hug.

Yes, and I know, too, I mustn't tell things I imagine as if they were true." His voice was despondent, then struck a vibrant, anguished note. "But, oh, Mums, it was such fun to imagine. I don't want to grow up!"

From my long-past childhood leaped an echo of his wail, and I drew him tighter.

"I know, darling," I told him. "I used to feel just that way. Suppose we try this plan. Whenever you feel like pretending something just sit down and write it all out and send it to me. And while you're doing it make believe just as hard as you want to."

Junior's eyes were wide with delight and joy.

"Why, then I'll be writing a story, won't I?" he asked. "Is that the way they do?"

"I'm sure the best of them do," I assured him, as my mother-in-law's peremptory knock fell upon the door and I put my little lad down to answer her summons.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Love Takes a Holiday

IN every model husband there is somewhere a dead Don Juan whose ghost faintly haunts him at this magic season.

When you reflect that Marc Antony was not a bachelor, but just a married man on his summer vacation, Cleopatra's conquest doesn't seem to have been a feat worth all the fuss that the poets and historians have made about it.

When a loving pair have reached the quarreling stage, they can't be deterred by a little thing like the lack of anything to quarrel about. They can always scrap quite merrily as to who has the sweeter disposition.

In choosing a wife or a motor car, the modern man apparently thinks that it would be foolish to select the solid, substantial kind rather than the showy, speedy kind, when he may want a brand-new model in a year or so.

This is the time of year when the heart feels the wanderlust, and many a woman wishes that she could take the bell off the family cat and tie it around her husband's neck.

Marriage, to a woman, is a table d'hote affair, in which she seldom has more than a choice between something solid, that doesn't appeal to her, and something light and tempting that will probably disagree with her.

A strong-minded man can resist anything on earth, except a beautiful woman who comes to him for "help and sympathy."

Marriage-able men are like melons: there are plenty of them to go all the way 'round, but most of them get spoiled before they are distributed.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

The Health Hazards in Industry

ACCORDING to the latest federal census, there are 42,000,000 people employed in gainful occupations in this country. This is a vast army.

DR. COPELAND

The machine age in which we live has given to the working man a higher standard of living than that possessed in any other age. He has shorter hours, better conditions of employment, and higher wages.

But the modern methods demand rigid, machine-like service which tends to make man's work equally mechanical. He is driven into grooves. Human values become machine values. The drabness and monotony of machine power is having its effects on the general health of workers, there is no doubt.

Very often do we hear that men, women and children are being exploited in the industrial world, but after all they are infinitely better off than in former times. In the old days, the industrial worker was exposed to many dangers. Children, especially, fell under the deplorable conditions of the sweat shop.

There are many problems yet to be solved. Not yet have industrial workers the proper physical examinations. Illness and physical disabilities must be detected and treated. Facilities for healthful living conditions in the home, and recreation sufficient to maintain health, are lacking in many industrial communities.

Today the health officer and the professional health worker are working side by side to bring about better health conditions in many of these industrial communities. But there is still room for the regulation of health protection and health promotion in many states.

Education for the worker in industry is needed badly. He must have a proper knowledge of healthful living.

His home environment must be improved. His recreational facilities must be made an important part of his daily life. His health and mental vigor depend very much on the proper use of his leisure hours. He must have sufficient exercise, if he is working in a sedentary occupation, and plenty of fresh air and sunshine to keep physically fit.

We need further child protection in labor. Until 1909, there were no laws made preventing children from entering dangerous trades. Since that time 50 occupations have been closed to children under 16 years of age.

Children in industry are exposed to all sorts of contagion, and infection in early youth takes a heavy toll in diseases in later life. These diseases from various infections of the body are called the "degenerative diseases." It is a tremendous problem to meet—the health hazards of children in industry.

Safety measures for the protection of workers in industry are many, and yet we are appalled at the great number of accidents among factory employes, and those in other occupations. More protection for workers is needed, more knowledge on the part of the worker how to maintain good health.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

FOR the growing bob the swirl at the rear, from one side to the other, is highly recommended, because the short ends are caught in the undulation and stay put. Changing the style of the coiffure is troublesome until the hair knows what is expected of it; a few weeks of training and the ordeal is over.

THE woman who has a few up and down ditches in her neck as well as some cross-wise channels should go in for neck exercises, turning the head from side to side with a strong muscular pull, nodding forward and throwing backward, sending the head around in circles.

THE health of the complexion is promoted and improved by a well balanced diet, by regular exercise out of doors every day, by the daily bath, by deep breathing and mental hygiene—since emotions mark themselves upon the human phiz. Cosmetics of a healing nature help, but sensible living is the one great factor.

STOOPED shoulders, the huddled figure, weaken the muscles of the back. The trouble isn't in the shoulders—it is in the spine. Old backbone hasn't any pep. It gets pep when you stretch it, make the body tall.

ABOUT two-thirds of the body weight consists of water; it is found in every organ and tissue. Six glasses a day are not too many. Don't forget. Six. Count 'em.

The White House Gang

placarded as being for sale. The windows were shuttered, the place obviously untenanted. Possibly we should not have given it a second glance had we not noticed, and our suspicions been aroused by the anxious black face and white eyes of an apprehensive little colored boy who strove to hide himself behind the half-opened door of the vestibule.

Emulating the leader of a troop of scout cavalry, Q raised his arm. We halted to observe and await further developments. Presently a kinky head, a worried forehead and the rolling eyes cautiously appeared from behind the edge of the door, to pop back instantly on discovering itself being investigated.

"He's not afraid just because of us," Q declared. "There's somebody hiding inside that house, by buzzard, and he's the lookout."

We agreed.

"Lock bicycles," Q said, "so that nobody can pinch 'em while we're in there, finding out."

Dick hauled out the length of steel chain and padlock with which we were accustomed to fasten all bicycles together, and we went in a body to the door of the house. The little colored boy heard us coming, however, and rushed out of the vestibule in such tremendous panic that he almost bowled us over. Away he ran and was out of sight almost by the time we turned to look after him. Tiptoeing cautiously, we entered the house.

"Sh-s-h-h!" Q warned. "I hear something silent and mysterious!"

Hear Noises

We listened, suspending respiration. From somewhere upstairs, and through the deserted hall, came a series of soft grunts and murmurings.

"I've always thought," Q whispered, "that Maj. Sylvester ought to permit us to wear badges, because, you know, we ought to be able to find out no end of things for him. Take this house," he added. "It's a bang-up place for a gorgeous murder, isn't it?"

The thought chilled the Gang's marrow, but Q showed no hesitation. "Up we go!" he commanded, "and no sniffling, coughing or sneezing. In fact, don't breathe; and don't walk on the middle of the stairs, they'll squeak, and give us away . . . put one foot on the outside, by the banisters, and the other on the inside, by the wall—"

Thus, we proceeded and by following Q's commands reached the landing without mishap. Turning in single-file, we went to the top of the second-floor stairs, where Q, thrilling with excitement, halted us again. Noiselessly—a great achievement—we crowded up behind him on the stairs, and peeked over his shoulder.

There, through the open door of the bathroom, we saw four white boys watching a fifth, who was colored, unscrewing a faucet with a monkey-wrench. They were stealing hardware!

Presently one of them spotted us, froze, clutched the boy nearest him, who turned and cried out. Then the whole crowd burst from the room, and the fight was on . . . all over the second story, hall, and rolling down the stairs while the house shook, the boy with the monkey-wrench trying his best to use it whenever he saw a head at which to strike. . . .

If there is virtue in fighting this was one of the most virtuous fights the Gang ever found joyful. The enemy's first idea appeared to be that we were a species of hijackers—that we had come to take by force the spigots and various fixtures they had ripped loose. When they discovered that such was not our purpose, that our objective seemed to be fighting for fighting's sake and had no bearing upon the loot, the realization weakened their morale, and we finally succeeded in forcing them from the house.

A Prisoner

Q looked over his command. Sailor Dick's eye was beginning to look puffy. Walker White's nose was oozing crimson; Q. himself, had a wide welt across his forehead. "I had lacerated my hand on human teeth, 'By buzzard'" Q said. "Wasn't that wonderful!"

"I bet they'll beat up the kid for letting us get by him at the door," Dick remarked.

"They must not be allowed to do that!" Q said with finality. "He's too small and too scared! He shouldn't have been put there in the beginning!"

The Gang agreed.

"Something's got to be done about him, right off!" Q decided. "We've got to follow up, and help him, somehow——"

Rushing to their bicycles, the Gang unlocked them and rode off in various directions. Q presently was seen to wave frantically at the juncture of Twenty-first and O streets. He had caught a colored youngster, but was uncertain as to his identity.

"That's not him!" Dick pronounced.

"No I ain't—I been fellin' him," pleaded the prisoner. "I ain't had nuffin' t'do with it, I swear I ain't."

Q looked at him, once. "I can't be sure myself, I fear," he admitted with reluctance.

"Leave me be, white boy," the colored lad insisted. "Go 'long yo' bizness, I ain't hurtin' a fly, I ain't——"

"Of course you're not," said Q placatingly; "but if you're the kid we think you are, you're in for a lot of hot water from your own gang——"

The child had turned almost white by this time, and the mention of hot water made him cringe in Quentin's grasp to such an extent that it was painful to behold. His captor flushed with the shame of it.

"I don't mean boiling water at all," exclaimed Q. "Doggone it, why can't you understand what we aim to do!" He turned to the Gang. "Anybody got any money?" he asked abruptly. Our communal resources yielded a total of forty cents. "Let's give it to him," said Quentin.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, April 2

A DAY of annoyance, delays and frustration may be predicted from the predominant planetary operations, although there may be many lively and intriguing situations, calling for wise manipulation. With care there may be benefits despite postponements and obstacles. Unusual events may transpire.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a lively and eventful year despite frustrations and postponements. With wisdom and sound business acumen some advantages may accrue.

A child born on this day may be clever, ingenius and independent, but will have to work for its ultimate success against many obstacles.

Sartorial Precision

Turning a true hem for hand-stitching is not always an easy task, but the success of it depends on sartorial precision. If the linen, or other fabric, is run through the machine hemmer without using any thread in the needle, the fold will be made evenly and definitely. There will be a sureness in the hand stitches that will lend an attractive quality to the finished piece.

Correct Manners

Furnishing the New Home

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Does the bride furnish all the china and kitchenware?

2—Who furnishes the silver?

BRIDE-TO-BE.

USUALLY.

2. Usually the wedding presents include the silver for the new home. The bride's parents often furnish this, or the groom's parents give the chest of silver as their wedding present. If the silver is not included in the wedding presents, the bride and groom supply it for themselves from the "common budget."

Book Plates

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me exactly how book plates are used? I have a box of 50 and do not quite understand how to use them.

READER.

BOOK plates are pasted in the front of our books—if we are fortunate enough to have book plates—to give them the personal possession air. They are usually pasted on the back of the cover, in the front—that is, on the very first page on the left as one opens the book. They may be pasted in the center of the page or a bit to the top, according to the design of the plate itself. I am sure that you are going to enjoy very much owning a book plate.

The Bridegroom's Attire

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for a bridegroom and his attendants to wear tuxedoes or dark blue suits at an informal church wedding, or should they wear full dress suits?

INTERESTED.

FOR an afternoon wedding the tuxedo suit or the full dress would be untimely—they are worn only in the evening, full dress for a formal affair, and tuxedo suits for informal affairs. For an informal afternoon wedding the gentlemen would probably wear dark blue business suits, although they could with perfect propriety wear cutaway coats and dark striped trousers.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

EMPLOYMENT PICKUP SEEN BY HOOVER

Expects Seasonal Forces To Generate Activities Increasing Prosperity

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Nature joins the ranks of the business bulls this month.

In past periods of trade readjustment, March has been a treacherous month, and President Hoover, a close student of the business annals, rather dreaded March. He expects the seasonal forces from now on to generate activities which will add to employment opportunities.

Roy A. Young, governor of the Federal Reserve Board at Washington, is a genial individual, temperamentally more inclined toward optimism than pessimism. Yet fate put him at the head of the Federal Reserve System during a period when the board was primarily engaged in trying to apply the brakes to check unwarranted enthusiasm. Playing such a restrictive role, Mr. Young came to be known by the outside public as an influence making for restraint, rather than venturesomeness.

Now that the economic situation has reversed and the need for restraint has largely disappeared, Mr. Young discloses to the public another side of his nature—closer to his true self.

URGES LESS HESITANCY

In urging business men and bankers to have the will to go forward again, Mr. Young, in his last speech, declared:

"It seems to me that others should have more initiative and less hesitancy, and I feel justified in making that appeal to the American people, feeling confident that the experience of 1928 and 1929 will be fresh enough in our minds to preclude any immediate recurrence of such speculative hysteria as we had at that time."

In underlining the real meaning of the new Federal Reserve policy, Mr. Young said:

"All I can say is that the Federal Reserve Banks have exhibited no hesitancy and that the Federal Reserve System has expressed itself in an easing program that is clearly evident to everyone.

"This is a great country, possessed of many advantages and great natural resources, inhabited with people anxious and willing to work, and its credit structure is one that can and will function."

Of late, commodity speculators have been bewildered by the uncertain influence of the Federal Farm Board in those markets.

Critics have spoken freely of the board's activities. What is the board's objective?

LEGGE EXPLAINS

Alexander Legge, chairman, in seeking to answer this question, said:

"Some people think the board's activities should be directed toward the arbitrary raising of the price level for agricultural products. The board cannot raise prices arbitrarily. Prices, as I have said many times before, are determined by basic economic conditions by the demand for a commodity, the supply available to meet that demand, and the manner in which that supply is fed to the market. What we hope to do is to assist farmers to become better able to compete with other groups in the markets of the nation and the world.

"Many attempts have been made to organize the farmers. Only a few of these attempts have been successful and those on a limited scale.

"The argument for curtailing production has been unpopular with the farmer as a rule. But I believe that in time he will come to see that if he can get more money for four bushels of wheat than he can for five it will be better him him to raise four bushels of wheat instead of five. A 20 per cent reduction, on an average, of what the farmer produces would make the tariff on wheat effective and give him a higher level of prices. I think it is conservative to say that 20 per cent less production would bring him 20 per cent more money than he is getting now for what he produces."

ACTION HELD BLUNDER

The other side of the question is set forth by James E. Boyle, professor of agricultural economics, Cornell University, who thinks that the Farm Board's price policy has been a fatal blunder.

"If the Farm Board continues to pursue the course it has followed for the first 10 months of its regime," he points out, in Forbes Magazine, "it is foredoomed to fail, exactly as Mr. Hoover warned the British rubber control of its ultimate failure. To control agricultural prices it is necessary to control two factors of price, the supply and the demand. The Farm Board controls neither, and can control neither.

"It should look ahead, not a few days or weeks as at present, but for five or 10 or 50 years. Farm relief must come slowly. The law permits the Farm Board to work out orderly programs for land utilization and orderly programs of production. Progress in this direction would benefit all classes in the country and hurt no one."

AUTO DEALERS' STOCKS LOW

NEW YORK, April 1.—At the annual meeting of the Studebaker Corporation directors were re-elected. A. R. Erskine, president, said:

"It is not always remembered that automobile manufacturers are engaged in wholesale rather than in the retail business, and consequently that their production and sales, especially in winter months, are not a true index of consumer buying. This winter automobile dealers have not stocked cars for spring business as heavily as usual. Automobile manufacturers have most heartily co-operated with dealers in maintaining low stock, and therefore unsold stocks of passenger cars in the United States on April 1 are considerably less than they have been for some years."

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Hit '30 Highs — Local Market Active

STOCKS TOUCH NEW HIGHS FOR YEAR

Trading Starting at Brisk Pace Shows Up as Heavy Profit Taking Appears

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP.)—Resumption of the upward price movement in today's stock market lifted more than 50 issues to new high levels for the year, but the advance encountered heavy profit taking and occasional short selling, which brought about a few substantial declines. Trading started off at a brisk pace but slowed up in the early afternoon, when the ticker caught up with the market for the first time in about a fortnight.

The demand for stocks embraced a rather broad list with the steels, public utilities and oils giving the best demonstrations of group strength. Extreme gains in the active issues ranged from 2 to 6 points, with a few specialties showing larger advances. Worthington Pump and Peoples Gas each broke 8 points but made partial recovery, the former selling down to 117 as against a high of 139 last week.

MONEY UNCHANGED

Call money renewed at 4 per cent. New funds came into the market but the demand was relatively light. The time money market was dull with rates unchanged. Bankers' acceptances were firmer, all maturities being advanced 1/8 to 1/4 of 1 per cent.

Two of the most constructive developments of the day were the announcement of President Grace of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, that first quarter earnings would run over $2.50 a share, and the publication of a report that operations of the United States Steel Corporation were now running at 83 per cent. United States Steel common advanced 3 points to 197, and Bethlehem crossed 110. Republic Steel common reached new high ground.

OILS IN DEMAND

Publication of a series of favorable 1929 earnings reports by oil companies brought fresh buying into the oil group.

Strength of such issues as Johns Manville, United Biscuit, Columbian Carbon, Safeway Stores, Liggett & Myers B, Bullard Company and F. G. Shattuck was offset by the heaviness of Union Pacific, Atchison, Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Checker Cab and J. I. Case.

Merchandising issues were in brisk demand in the late trading. Advances of 2 to 5 points appeared in Montgomery Ward, Simmons, Woolworth, Safeway Stores, Shattuck, and Jewel Tea. United Aircraft was pushed across 91 into new high ground for the year, and substantial advances were also made by Columbian Carbon, American International and McKeesport Tin Plate. The closing tone was strong. Total sales approximated 4,800,000 shares.

MARCH MOTOR SHIPMENTS

DETROIT, April 1.—Buick Motor Company, division of General Motors, reports shipments of 8,760 units in March, 1930.

Shipments for March this year compare with 15,206 in March, 1929, and 8,842 in February, this year. April schedule calls for production of approximately 9,000 cars.

Graham Paige reports production, in March, of 4,937 units, an increase of 1,148 over February.

Hupp Motor in March shipped 3,212 cars against 2,029 in February and 4,316 in March, 1929.

Oldsmobile shipments were 7,676 cars, against 6,646 in February and 13,000 in March, 1929. April schedule is 10,505 cars.

STEEL BOOSTS OPERATIONS

NEW YORK, April 1.—Ingot production of the United States Steel Corporation is now at slightly better than 83 per cent of capacity, against about 80 per cent in the two preceding weeks.

Independents are running at about 69 per cent, as against 65 per cent in the previous week and 68 per cent two weeks ago.

For the entire industry, the average is better than 76 per cent, against 73 per cent in the preceding week and 74 per cent two weeks ago.

At this time last year United States Steel was at 97 per cent, with independents running in excess of 93 per cent and the average better than 95 per cent.

Boston and Maine Seeks Bond Issue

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Permission to issue $15,000,000 of 5 per cent mortgage bonds, $6,787,021 of which would be used for additions and betterments to the road, was sought today by the Boston and Maine Railroad in an application to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 1.—Curb Market stocks continued to work gradually higher today, although profit taking sales were again heavy, and upward progress was difficult. The selling began to slacken by early afternoon, however, and the market displayed increasing strength. Buying and selling orders were so evenly balanced during the morning, that price changes were mostly narrow.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

What Dividend Record Shows for Quarter

—By B. C. FORBES—

THE first quarter's dividend record has both favorable and unfavorable features the record compiled exclusively for this column show.

The total of 450 improved dividend disbursements compares with 442 a year ago.

But no fewer than 137 companies either reduced or omitted their payments contrasted with only 30 in the first three months of last year and 44 in both 1928 and 1927.

THE prospect is that the second quarter will also bring an unusual number of poorer payments because first-quarter profits of many companies have declined badly. Should business enjoy immediate and substantial recovery many boards of directors probably would be influenced to maintain their regular rates even though earnings in the quarter just ended did not by themselves warrant such. The general disposition is to treat stockholders generously rather than niggardly. Surpluses may therefore be drawn upon to avoid entailing the curtailment of stockholders' dividend income. After all this is a perfectly legitimate use to make of surpluses whenever feasible.

MARCH brought a rather severe reduction in cheerful dividend declarations as compared with a year ago: 161 against 196. February was the first month in years to make an unfavorable comparison with the corresponding month favorable dividends then announced totaled 117 compared with 126 last year. January on the other hand showed a gain of not fewer than 52.

It will be noted that the greatest change was in the number of extra disbursements announced. This is accounted for mainly by the action taken by many directorates following the stock panic. Now that the stock market has been exhibiting strength directors feel no necessity for bolstering up sentiment by distributing extra amounts to stockholders.

A decrease is shown in the number of companies making initial payments. This suggests that more caution in inaugurating disbursements is being exercised this year than was exercised a year ago when business was booming.

It is interesting to note that 15 favorable railway payments were announced last quarter, whereas only eight appeared in the tables covering the first quarter of last year. Public utilities show only a nominal gain.

THE dividend action most eagerly awaited last month was that of the Anaconda directors. Many in Wall street predicted a reduction in the regular 1¾ per cent quarterly rate in view of the sharp falling off in the buying of copper at the maintained price of 18 cents a pound. Declaration of the full rate was promptly interpreted as reflecting confidence on the part of leading copper interests that the 18 cents level could be preserved.

After holding rigidly aloof following the stock market collapse, several very large consumers have re-entered the market with extensive orders. The principal producers now that there is no danger of price demoralization.

MAY the suggestion be made that, wherever possible corporations put their best foot foremost dividend wise during the next few months? After that the need for so doing it is to be hoped will have passed.

Abilene & Southern Work Recommended

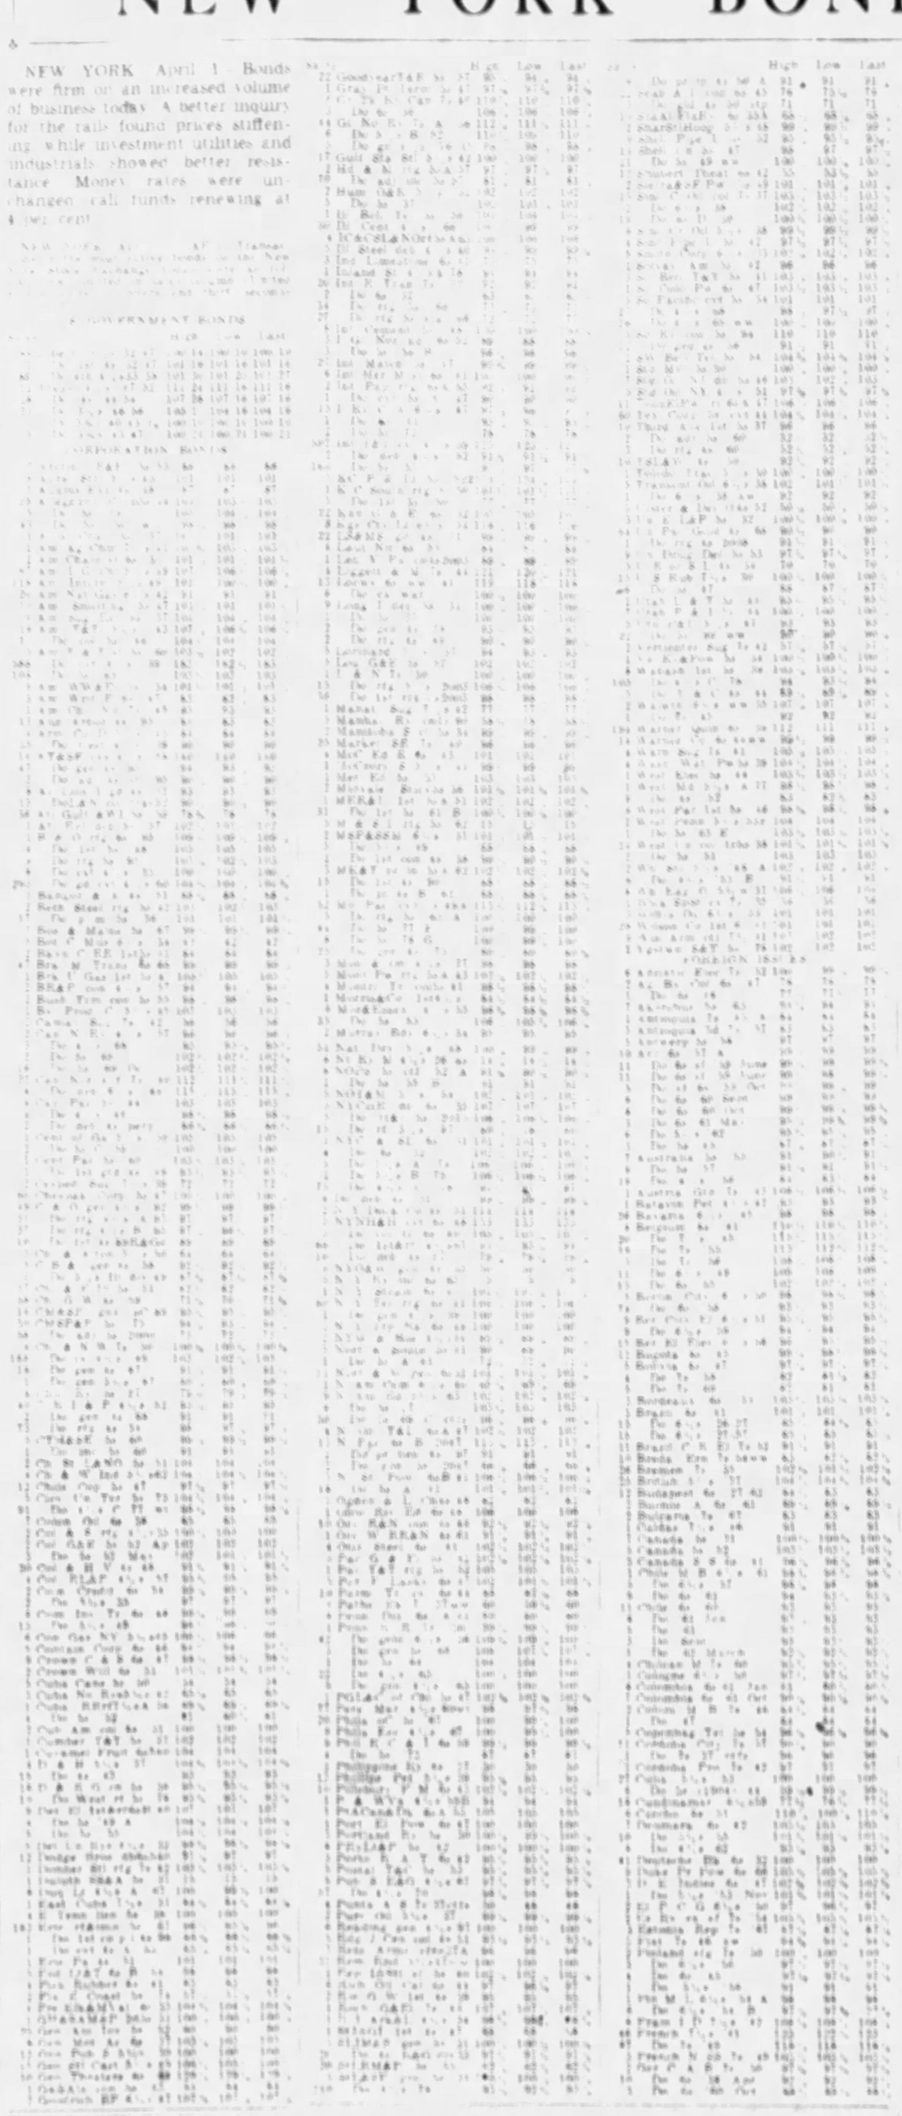
WASHINGTON, April 1.—Approval of the Abilene and Southern Railway's proposed construction between Ballinger and San Angelo, unless the Santa Fe grants complete trackage rights to the road within 30 days over its line between the two points, would be given by the Interstate Commerce Commission under recommendations submitted today by one of its examiners.

Estimate of Cotton Consumption Lower

NEW YORK, April 1.—The New York Cotton Exchange service puts world consumption of American cotton in February at 1,061,000 bales, compared with 1,200,000 bales in January and 1,237,000 in February a year ago. Total consumption for the 7 months ended February 28 is placed at 8,165,000 bales, against 8,850,000 in the corresponding period of last season.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 1.—Bonds were firm on an increased volume of business today. A better inquiry for the rails found prices stiffening while investment utilities and industrials showed better resistance. Money rates were unchanged, call funds renewing at 4 per cent.



FARM MACHINE EXPORTS UP

NEW YORK, April 1.—Export sales of American farm implements last year amounting to $140,800,000, exceeded by 21 per cent the previous high record of $116,600,000 established in 1928, according to the Index published by the New York Trust Company. Out of the 10 countries taking 83 per cent of the total, Canada, Argentina and Russia remained the three chief markets.

"Tractors, combines, tractor-drawn implements, internal-combustion engines, and other power-farming machines were shipped abroad in larger quantities than ever before. Increases were evident in all types of equipment with the exception of cream separators, lawn mowers, threshers and small horsepower wheel tractors."

Brimstone Protests Recapture Order

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Brimstone Railroad and Canal Company filed its reply with the Interstate Commerce Commission protesting against the commission's recently issued recapture of excess earnings against the carrier in an amended report. The road urges withdrawal of the commissions report, acceptance of its excess earnings report as made in the road's return and elimination of the section of the order directing payment which would require the carrier to post a bond for amount alleged to be due.

Steel Institute Plans Scrap Survey

NEW YORK, April 1.—The American Iron and Steel Institute has appointed James A. Farrell president of the United States Steel Corporation, Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, L. N. Block, chairman of the Inland Steel Corporation, of Chicago, as a special committee to confer with a committee of the institute of scrap iron and steel on problems relative to the steel and scrap iron industries. Mr. Farrell will act as chairman of the committee.

National Tube Co. Cuts Pipe Prices

The National Tube Company, subsidiary of United States Steel Corporation, has reduced the price of steel pipe $4 a ton.

This action had been contemplated for some time. It had been believed that the price of pipe had been out of line with some other iron and steel commodities. Trade authorities expect the reduction to have the effect of stabilizing the market for pipe.

It is reported consideration is being given to adjustments of the price in some other lines to levels which will more nearly represent actual selling prices prevailing at present.

NEW VANADIUM PLANT READY IN FALL

Will Recover Titanium From Mine in Virginia; Has Many Chemical Uses

NEW YORK, April 1.—Vanadium Corporation of America will begin to get a fair return on its investment in the Virginia ilmenite mine as soon as the $1,250,000 plant is ready for operation, which will not be until September or October.

Officials of the company regard as fantastic some of the "statistics" in Wall street purporting to show prices to be charged for the output and profits which will result. Definite figures are not available from the management.

Titanium, which will be taken from the ilmenite, is not a rare element, nor is there a wide commercial market for it as yet. Deposits of titanium are as abundant as lead, copper or zinc, but principally because it occurs in widely scattered and small quantities it often is not commercially recoverable.

PHOSPHATES IMPORTANT

Much of this country's requirements are imported. Principal workable deposits are in Quebec, Canada; Sweden, South Australia and India. In itself, titanium is not important commercially, but as a ferro-alloy or compound it has useful applications in industry. Vanadium's ability to make money from its operations at the Virginia mine apparently will be due largely to its utilization of all the elements or by-products.

Steel manufacturers use titanium as a ferro-alloy, for a small portion of it melted with steel gives a cleaner and sounder product. In addition, titanium compounds are used in the manufacture of arc-lamp electrodes, and as pigments in paints, dyes, textiles and leathers.

OFFICIALS OPTIMISTIC

Vanadium officials are optimistic regarding prospects for the Virginia mine. The formation of the deposit lends itself readily to economical operations, and the company is hopeful of enjoying profits, not merely from the titanium to be recovered, but from the salts of phosphoric acid, or phosphates. It is not improbable that the phosphates may prove more important commercially than the titanium, and the latter eventually may become the by-product. The position the various products will occupy in industry will begin to move into consumption.

NEW FINANCING

Vanadium will require no financing to carry on its development, for the company is in a particularly strong financial position. Several experiments are being conducted in the chemical field and any that appear to have commercial possibilities will be developed. The company's principal business is in the metallurgical end of the mining industry and profits are derived from sale of ferro-alloys to steel manufacturers, which are used in small percentages in the making of tonnage or heavier steels.

Net profit for 1929, after all charges, was $1,849,886, or $4.89 a share on 378,367 capital shares outstanding. In 1928, net profit was $1,706,204, or $4.53a share on 376,637 shares.

Rail-River Rate Still Thought Too High

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

WHILE coal operators in this district scored a freight rate victory yesterday, many producers here and consumers at Youngstown expressed the belief that they were entitled to more favorable terms than those named by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The ruling covered rates on coal to be shipped from mines in this district by river to Colona or Conway, Pa., and to be moved by rail from there to the Youngstown district. The commission decided that the rate of $1.02 a ton which the railroads proposed to charge for their share of the haul was unreasonable. It stated that 77 cents a ton was the maximum rate to which the roads are entitled.

Many of the shippers and consumers contended yesterday that the maximum should have been set between 50 and 55 cents a ton. They stated that limestone moving in the opposite direction by an all-rail route from the Hillsville district in Ohio to Aliquippa takes a 55-cent rate. The coal traffic to be developed over the new combination rail and river route would be in far greater volume. Since this material is handled in the same manner as coal over about the same distance, they feel that they are entitled to a corresponding rate.

Makes Route Possible

THE decision of the commission was significant to this district since it assures coal mines here of a combination freight cost which will be workable and makes the eventual establishment of the new route possible. The figure of $1.02 asked by the railroads would have killed the plan. The river end of the transportation will cost about 30 cents a ton. The total cost would be about $1.32 a ton compared with the existing all-rail rate of $1.34 a ton.

The rate ordered by the commission will make a total cost of $1.07 a ton, a saving of 27 cents a ton. The rate of 50 cents which coal producers and consumers desire would result in a rate of 80 cents a ton, which would save 54 cents a ton.

Effect In Future

AS IT IS understood here, the ruling of the commission will not automatically put the 77-cent rate into effect. The commission merely stated that it would not approve any rate higher than this amount. The next move is up to the railroads. They can either file a 77-cent rate schedule or take no action at all.

If the railroads accept the 77-cent rate some time must elapse before the necessary facilities for transferring coal from barges to railroad cars can be installed. If they do nothing the Pittsburgh Coal Company will be expected to force them into line by again asking the commission to allow it to build its own railroad by making extensions of the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western, which it controls. Permission to do this was refused in the past when the railroads offered to supply the desired service. It is considered very unlikely that the railroad extensions will ever be built by the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

In any event, it is improbable that the new combination route will be in operation in time for the present lake coal season.

Lake Cargo Possibilities

THE commission injected a new note into the case when it stated that any rate established must afford a basis for future establishment of rates to other Ohio points including lake ports. This angle had never been raised by the coal operators in their fight for the lower rate to Youngstown, although they had undoubtedly considered it.

It now seems possible that the coal producers in this district may eventually find the solution of the lake cargo coal rate case in the establishment of this new rail-river route.

Federal Reserve Members' Loans Up

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The Federal Reserve Board's statement of weekly reporting member banks in leading cities on March 26 shows increases for the week of $49,000,000 in loans and investments, $129,000,000 in net demand deposits and $110,000,000 in time deposits. Boston Announces New Refrigerator

BOSTON, April 1.—An automatic gas refrigerator, said to be of entirely new design, has been developed at the laboratory of Constock & Westcott, Inc., at Boston, according to the American Gas Association. J. J. Bodell, of Providence, financed this work which is understood to have been going on for the past six years. Design of this new unit is such that it cannot be included under any previous classification of refrigerators. It employs water as the refrigerating fluid, air for cooling and mercury vapor as the source of energy. The unit may be placed either in the basement or put into the icebox itself.

Sears, Roebuck Sales Dro, 10.9 Per Cent During Month.

AN attempt was made yesterday to capitalize marketwise the relatively poor showing of Sears, Roebuck sales from February 27 to March 26 last, representing the third month of its new 13-month year. Sales for the period this year totaled $25,174,441 showing a decrease of 10.9 per cent compared with the same period a year ago. The drop was ascribed in part to the fact that eastern trade came at the end of March last year, whereas this year it is three weeks later. From January 2 to March 26, the company's sales aggregated $79,619,584 or one-tenth of one per cent in excess of the corresponding period last year. The stock dipped several points following the appearance of the figures, but subsequently recovered most of its loss.

The fact that Wabash is controlled by Pennsylvania is frequently pointed to as the reason a dividend on the common stock of the former is regarded as imminent in some sections of the New York financial district. It is pointed out that the resumption of dividends on New Haven common and subsequent increases in the annual rate were mainly due to Pennsylvania influence. Dividends on Boston and Maine common and an increase in the rate of the Maine Central followed purchases of substantial blocks of those stocks by the Pennsy. Certainly there can be no doubt that a dividend on Long Island Railroad can be attributed to the Pennsylvania. Indications are that Wabash will return earnings of approximately $5 a share on the common for the current year.

THE final day of the month found money firm at the 4 per cent renewal figure. The supply was about sufficient to balance the demand throughout the day. Further liberal calling was reported, such withdrawals probably totaling up to some $60,000,000, but the effect of this was offset by the return to the market as lenders of several large banks who had been active in calling money last week. In addition to meeting month-end disbursements, the market also felt to some extent the fact that payment was due yesterday on $87,500,000 Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company stock. The average renewal rate for March figured out 3.72 per cent, the lowest since November, 1927, when it was 3.57 per cent, and in contrast with the 9.52 per cent average for March last year.

Among some of those who were most determined in their adherence to the bull side some weeks ago, there is a feeling of increased caution at the moment. As a matter of fact a good deal of profit taking has been under way by these people during the last few days. This shortening of speculative lines is based on the theory that the market is entitled to something in the way of a corrective reaction from these levels. However, such reactions seldom develop when the vast majority look for them, as at the moment. And presently a good many traders are of the opinion that a good reaction is due.

SEVERAL New York commission houses are beginning to find that business is showing a tendency to "dry up" when the ticker lags too far behind the market. This was found to be so on several days last week, and again yesterday more than one customers' man had the same complaint to make. One trader, seeing the tape reported 37 minutes late in the noon hour, was inclined to ask: "I wonder who is doing all the business?" He added a moment later, "I haven't done anything since the tape began to run behind." People apparently are showing less willingness to trade on the late tape just now than was the case some months ago.

The situation marketwise existing with regard to Continental Can and American Can is believed to be somewhat similar to that which prevailed a few days ago in the case of Westinghouse Electric and General Electric. To be in line with American Can it is thought that Continental should be selling considerably higher. Continental had a highly successful year in 1929 and the outlook for this year is bright. In some quarters an early revival of merger rumors between this company and Illinois Glass is looked for as the consummation of the deal between two important companies would be a highly desirable development.

DILLON, READ OFFER BONDS

A $13,000,000 issue of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds of the Louisiana and Arkansas Railway Company, the major portion of which has been issued by the company in connection with its acquisition of the Louisiana Railway and Navigation Company, is being offered today by a banking group comprising Dillon, Read and Company, Chase Securities Corporation, E. H. Rollins and Sons, A. Iselin and Company, Central Illinois Company, Inc., A. G. Becker and Company, Foreman-State Corporation, Rogers Caldwell and Company, Inc., Canal Bank and Trust Company and John Nickerson and Company, Inc.

The bonds, which are designated as Series A and are due in 1969, are priced at 92 and interest to yield about 5.50 per cent. The bankers have withheld $1,500,000 of the issue for private sale.

Upon the acquisition of the Louisiana Railway and Navigation Company last year, the Louisiana and Arkansas Railway Company leased all of the lines and other property of the former for a period of 999 years. Main lines operated by the company extend from Hope, in the Southwestern Arkansas through to Alexandria and Baton Rouge, Louisiana to New Orleans and from Shreveport to Alexandria. Total lines operated by the company, including branches, comprise about 608 miles. Valuable terminal properties are owned in New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Alexandria and Shreveport.

Combined results of operation of the Louisiana and Arkansas Railway Company and the Louisiana Railway and Nevigation Company for 1929 show railway operating revenues of $7,866,685, against $7,284,498 in 1928 and net income available for interest, but before Federal taxes of $1,491,226, compared with $1,196,855 in the preceding year. The improvement, in the opinion of the management, is partly due to benefits and economies resulting from the unification affected in May of last year.

First quarter transactions aggregated 227,583,540, shares against 294,434,260 in the same period last year.

EASTMAN FIRST I. C. C. WITNESS

WASHINGTON, April 1. — In calling Commissioner Eastman, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as the first witness in its investigation of railroad holding companies, the House Interstate Commerce Committee has assured itself that practices of the companies condemned by the commission will be investigated at the outset.

Eastman is expected in his testimony Saturday to lay the foundation for months of inquiry into the actual ownership of the nation's carriers and legislation necessary to control them.

Listed as an independent both politically and on the bench, the commissioner has consistently opposed anything with a hint of monopoly. Writing a separate opinion last December on the commission's consolidation plan, he said: "There is reason to believe that the country is becoming considerably alarmed by the progress of consolidation and unifications among industries in general, and it is feared that control of industry is rapidly passing into a few hands with the danger that we shall become a nation of clerks and subordinates."

HARGREAVES' HUSTLING SAVES HIS JOB

LIKE the other departments of the Pittsburgh ball club, the catching branch is rich in promise, and there is every indication that that end of the work will be cared for in highly acceptable fashion during the season that will open two weeks from today. A rather unexpected development in this connection is the splendid form being shown in the practice games by Charley Hargreaves. This veteran member of the backstopping corps has been one of the spring standouts and is certain to be assigned to do a lot of the receiving.

Charley Hargreaves

During the winter Hargreaves was slated for release. The management figured that he had outlived his usefulness here and it was only as a sort of insurance policy that he was retained for the spring, Skipper Ens deciding to hang on to him until he could learn just how the other members of the staff might be expected to shape up. The threatened transfer appears to have aroused Hargreaves, as he has been hustling with all the enthusiasm of a youngster. The result is that his new spirit has won back his slipping job, and on his spring form Charley is going to be more valuable to the Bucs than at any time since he was obtained from Brooklyn on June 8, 1928, in a trade for Johnny Gooch and Joe Harris.

THE possibilities of Ralston Hemsley depend entirely upon himself. The youngster has more speed than any other receiver in the majors and possesses enough other qualifications to become the best catcher in baseball, all things considered, and how far he will be able to go this year is all a question as to how seriously he takes his work.

Al Bool, the new acquisition from Baltimore, will be a handy man to have around. He owns a powerful throwing arm and is a long hitter. He is not flashy, but looks to be steady and dependable. Johnny O'Connell has improved and will be more serviceable than heretofore if it is decided to keep him. All around, the catching situation is the most encouraging in several years.

LONG experience has taught Barney Dreyfuss to view the breaks of baseball philosophically. Whereas the heads of other clubs have been singing the blues over spring injuries to star players, the Pirate owner looks only on the bright side and points out that it is better to have such things happen now than after the opening of the season.

Barney Dreyfuss

"Injuries and ailments are part of baseball, part of the fortunes of war," he says. "These things are bound to occur and cannot be avoided. Every club must bear its share, and the fact that we are getting ours now may mean that we'll escape similar misfortune later when it would cost us many more real ball games."

UNQUESTIONABLY it's the right viewpoint and it applies particularly to the case of Pie Traynor. It's unfortunate, of course, that Pie had to leave the team and head for Pittsburgh to undergo treatment for his ailing eye, meaning that he will be deprived of the benefits of the practice games through the South. But there is every assurance that the Buccaneer captain will have recovered by the time the pennant race begins, so that his incapacitation is not nearly so hard a blow to the club now than it would have been if it had occurred at a time to cause the loss of his services for a similar period during the regular season. Once the troublesome optic has mended, Pie may be depended upon to whip himself into playing shape again much more quickly than would the average player.

OFTEN it happens that a baseball rookie who survives the first of the spring tests, survives the initial weedouts and appears to have a regular job in the lineup practically cinched, doesn't look so good and begins to slip in the second month of training. Outfielder Dusty Cooke, of the Yankees, may be one of them.

Cooke batted .358 for St. Paul last year and showed us so well during the first few weeks of practice this spring that Manager Bob Shawkey announced the definite selection of the recruit for one of the regular outfield berths. But Cooke seems to be wilting. He looks weak against southpaws and none too strong against some varieties of right-hand major league pitching.

MOREOVER, Cooke's showing as a sunfielder has been anything but satisfactory. He has displayed glaring weaknesses in that respect, and though Shawkey expresses the hope that a change of glasses will improve him the Yankee pilot is clearly not so confident as he was about the new player's future.

On another team it might be possible to move Cooke to another field, but in the Yankee lineup somebody other than Babe Ruth has got to play the sun garden—left or right as the case may be—so as to save the Bambino's batting eye. Some players say that Bob Meusel was ruined that way to protect the Babe. So Shawkey may be forced to change his plans and entrust the sunfield to somebody else, probably Sam Byrd.

Barney Friberg

BURT SHOTTON, manager of the Phillies, does not stop at pronouncing Barney Friberg the most valuable player in the National League. He calls him the most valuable in all baseball with the solitary exception of Babe Ruth. "He has played every position on the club since he joined the Phillies in 1925," says Shotton, "and never has he failed to perform like a regular. When Thevenow was out last season, Friberg jumped in and not only fielded like a master but hit the ball at a .367 clip. He won between 10 and 15 games for us by his hitting alone. If the Phils had won the pennant last season, those voting on the most valuable player in the league would have had no other course open than to award the prize to Barney."

SPEAKING of Friberg, the Phillies' handy man and a strong reserve hitter may not be the only valuable player in the National League who will be kept sitting on the bench this season. Like Fred Brickell, Jim Mosolf and Stewie Clarke, of the Pirates, Harvey Hendrick, of the Dodgers, is another who is likely to spend much of his time in the shelter of the dugout in spite of the possession of uncommon ability.

It had been planned to use Hendrick at first base in event of Del Bissonette's being unable to play, but during the last week Bissonette has been recovering so rapidly from the effects of two winter operations and crop of boils that it looks as if he will be fit for the opening of the season. And the signing of Babe Herman crowds Hendrick out of the outfield, as the trio there will be made up of Herman, Johnny Frederick and Rube Bressler.

ANOTHER season of Eastern horse racing is ushered in today. The bugler sounds "Boots and Saddles" at the Bowie track this afternoon, and racing will continue there until April 12, transferring later to two other Maryland courses—Havre de Grace from April 14 to

M'NAMARA VICTOR

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP.)—Jimmy McNamara, New York lightweight, won a decision victory over Al Bryant, of Newark, N. J., in a 10-round bout on the St. Nicholas Arena card last night. The winner weighed 138¾, Bryant 137½.

TAYLOR, LA BARBA SIGNED

CHICAGO, April 1.—(AP.)—Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., has been signed to replace Earl Maestro, of Chicago, for a 10-round match with Fidel La Barba, at the Chicago Coliseum, April 21. Maestro has cancelled immediate bouts, because of the death of his mother.

PIN TOURNEY LEADERS ARE UNCHANGED

CLEVELAND, April 1.—(AP.)—Buffalo and Cleveland teams will almost monopolize the alleys in the annual tournament of the American Bowling Congress tonight. Twenty-five Buffalo quintets and 16 local fives will operate on the two shifts.

Other teams will come from Chicago, Denver, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Oshkosh and Janesville, Wis.; Elgin, Ill.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Pontiac, Mich., and Oswego and Dunkirk, N. Y.

NO NEW LEADERS

They will find their work of getting among the high 10 leaders no harder as a result of last night's activities, although a number of star aggregations took the drives. The Chene-Trombly Recreations of Detroit came the closest to upsetting the leaders, but missed half a dozen spares in the last game and their 2,921 was the best score of the night only.

G. Heup, Beloit, Wis., featured yesterday's sessions, his 729 carrying him and his partner, J. Divine, to first place in the doubles with a total of 1,339. Heup also took second in the all-events with 1,966. Adolpre Unke, Milwaukee, last year's singles champion, failed to repeat. Joe Falcaro, of New York, world match game champion, likewise failed to place among the singles leaders although he had a good series of 656.

LOCALS POOR

The Allegheny Social-Coons and Squirrels, of Pittsburgh, showed little class yesterday. The best rolling was by Dick Haefele, of the Squirrels. Joe Meder's Deers did not roll, owing to the death of Mrs. J. Frederick yesterday morning. The team will shoot Sunday night.

The standing of the leaders:

Five-men event—Schwartz Ballrooms, Hartford, Wis., 2,959; Spartans, New York, 2,959; McGrath Plumbers, Libertyville, Ill., 2,958; Erie Paint Company, Erie, Pa., 2,954; Dwyers, New York, 2,951.

Nick Altrock Says:

SOMEWHERE SOUTH, April 1.—I see Babe Herman finally signed up with Brooklyn. That makes him the last Robin of the spring training season. Babe and Shires were holding out for $25,000 a year, but when he saw what the Great One signed for, Babe reached for a fountain pen before the bottom dropped out of the market. Fifteen grand a year isn't at all bad, even if you have to play in Brooklyn to get it. This is sure a bad year for holdouts when there are more wolves than there are doorsteps. The way salaries have been knocked down this spring the magnates could give the bootleggers tips on cutting.

TOMORROW—A FLOATING ISLAND.

MELLOW LOSES TO GOODMAN

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Johnny Mellow, of Detroit, veteran lightweight boxer, took a one-sided beating from Joey Goodman, hard-punching young Clevelander, in the 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden last night as reports circulated through the crowd that he was fighting unaware of a message from his home that his young son, Melvin, 4 years old, had been killed by an automobile truck or had died of illness a few hours before the boxer entered the ring.

The telephone message was received by Irish Kane, trainer of Flynn's gymnasium, and transmitted to Bert Conners, Mellow's manager, who, in the absence of confirmation, withheld it from Mellow, not even telling him when the bout was over. Mellow left on a train for Detroit shortly before 1 o'clock this morning.

Later word was received from news sources in Detroit that reporters sent to the Mellow home had found the child alive and well and the reports utterly unfounded, founded.

EASY FOR GOODMAN

Goodman was entirely too fast and strong and too clean a puncher for Mellow, who has turned in some notable conquests in these parts in the last five years. Joey scored at will with either hand and Mellow even failed at his forte, counter-punching. In fact, until the last few rounds, Mellow seldom let a punch go except in the clinches. He stood up under a pounding and dizzying barrage of rights to the head and also was nailed with many left hooks.

Aside from the easy manner in which Goodman scored his fourth straight victory here, his other victims having been Herman Perlick and Eddie Brannon, both of whom he knocked out, and Maxie

The Lowdown On the Pirates

By The Benchwarmer

SOMEWHERE IN THE WIDE OPEN SPACES WITH THE PIRATES—Well, folks here I am with the season only two weeks away and it looks like I'll be warmin' the ol' bench when the big stuff starts.

I had to come up with a bad arm the first day we hits Paso Robles and the ol' whip is still raisin' the dickens with me. Every time Jewel passes me on the bench he says, "How's the ol' arm, kid?" You can imagine my embarrassment—I often wish I was back in the Blue Ridge League. But I heard Charley Hargreaves sayin' that Jewel is jes' givin' me the needles when he asks me about my arm. Gee, I hope that's right, because the boss is a swell guy.

GETS TOUGH BREAKS

It's just one tough break after another with me. You see, I saved up nearly all winter after last season closed. When I heard the Pirates drafted me, I says to myself, "That's means a dandy trip to Paso Robles, so you better start to save some jack." You see, the club pays your board, room and laundry, but a fellow has to step out a bit. Well, I had over 200 berries in the old kick when I left Pittsburgh. I played a little 5-and-10 on the train and broke even, but I got myself in a little jam at Paso. Gee, if the folks knew I dropped that dough in a crap game they would feel awful

You see, some city slicker puts himself up a joint in Paso Robles and some of the stars of the team went over and threw the bones and my palms began to itch. Well, I cops myself 50 plasters the first night and won some more the next few days, but the old luck began to change and I wound up $100 to the bad. An' you don't get much sympathy from the players.

I think Jewel got to hear about it and he was sore. As soon as he learned about the joint he put the ban on it for his players. Said

PHIL GOLDSTEIN TO TRAIN HERE

Promoter Francis Flynn announced this morning he had signed Tommy Ward, of the South Side, and Dominick Profio, of Cecil, for a return bout in the six-round semi-final. Ward recently upset the dope by beating Profio at Duquesne Garden.

Between Rounds

Freddie Fitzgerald and Al Reed box the 10-round windup of a show at Erie Friday night. Ray Collins and Jimmy Reed are in the 10-round semi-final. The Northwestern Pennsylvania amateur championships get under way in Erie tonight.

Eight bouts will make up the card at Duquesne Garden Friday night to raise money to send Pittsburgh's amateur team to Boston for the National senior championships next week. The team will be entirely equipped with new ring paraphernalia out of the proceeds and will be introduced to the fans at this show.

RUDY, GIZZY WIN BOUTS

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 1.—Young Rudy, of Charleroi, Pa., won a 10-round decision over Paul Oger, Barberton, O., here last night. The judges awarded Rudy the verdict and the referee voted the bout a draw. Rudy weighed 144 and Oger 145½.

In the six-round semi-final Cowboy DeLuca, 146, Pittsburgh, drew with Jimmy McGraw, 147, Martins Ferry. Young Burkei, 157½, won the decision over Bartley Madden, 165, Wheeling, in six rounds, and Tony Quinto, 123¼, Martins Ferry, defeated Ray Wormsley, 121½, Washington, in another six-rounder.

O'DOWD FOULS GIZZY

WHEELING, W. Va., April 1.—(AP.)—Battling Gizzy, of Washington, Pa., won on a foul over Midget Mike O'Dowd, Columbus, O., lightweight, in the six round of a scheduled 10-round bout here last night. O'Dowd floored Gizzy for a count of eight in the fifth.

Charley Baxter, Columbus, O., and Tommy Heilman, Pittsburgh, battled to a draw in the six-round semi-final.

In other bouts, Cato Calubo, Cleveland, knocked out Marty Ward, Pittsburgh, in the first minute of the first round and Young Caruso, Weirton, outpointed Ralph Oger, Moundsville, in six rounds.

PERLICK TWINS BOW

BOSTON, April 1.—(AP.)—The Perlick Twins, lightweights, from Kalamazoo, Mich., were both on the short ends of close decisions in 10-round bouts here last night. Herman, who gave the most convincing Perlick performance, bowed to the veteran Bruce Flowers, of New Rochelle, N. Y., while Henry was shaded by Hy Diamond, Boston southpaw.

Herman had a slight lead on the aging Flowers going into the final round, but the latter unleashed a furious two-handed attack that swept him on to the decision.

DICK MAY BE OUT OF ACTION SEVERAL DAYS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

EL PASO, Tex., April 1.—Still another casualty was in the Pirate family today as the Ensmen rolled along toward Houston nd Beaumont for further barnstorming action. Little Dick Bartell, the peppiest member of the squad, is nursing a lame right ankle which will keep him out of action for several days — perhaps longer. The accident occurred in the third inning of yesterday's game between the Buccos and Tucson team at Tucson.

Dick Bartell.

Bartell was hurt when his foot slipped off second base as he ran toward the bag with the idea of helping in a double play, started by Engle. Charley touched the runner himself and then threw to Suhr to complete the double shuffle, but as the Pirates started to their bench they noted the little infielder was in pain. In rushing to the bag, Dick's foot slipped and his ankle was badly wrenched. He had to be carried off the field and later assisted to the hotel.

X-RAY ANKLE

The shortstop was given a long series of treatments by the Pittsburgh physicians. The ankle was so painfully injured that it swelled up unusually. Much of the evening was used by the player in reducing the swelling. X-ray pictures are to be made, but the doctors did not think any bones were broken.

Sprains, at times, are said to be just about as bad as fractures and nothing definite will be known about Bartell for a day or so. Meantime, Ben Sankey, who relieved Bartell yesterday, will cavort in the Wagnerian role.

The loss of Traynor and Bartell over an extended period would prove a very serious blow to the Buccos. Put either of these infielders on the idle list a long spell and the flag chances of the club doubtless would be affected.

Bartell seems to be on the verge of a big season. He had hardly signed his contract before he pepped up the morale of the club, his general behavior being the talk of the team veterans.

TUCSON DOWNED 5-3

There is no gainsaying Dick's value to the spritliness of the club. He is not the slugging type of batter, and any shortcoming at the plate on his part is made up by his aggressiveness.

After defeating the Tucson team of the Arizona State League, 5 to 3, the Pirates later began the longest lap of their journey back home. They reached Texas this morning and are due at Houston tomorrow morning. About half of the Pittsburghers will stop traveling, for when the flyer reaches Houston the other half so continue on to Beaumont, where a game will be staged with the Beaumont team of the Texas League. Beaumont, being only eight miles from the bigger city, the travelers will hustle back to Beaumont in the evening.

The Pirates are due to open a four-game series with the Houston team Thursday. On Friday, a club composed of Regulars and Yanigans will play the Wichita team of the Western League at that club's training camp in Har-

DORMONT CLUB ENTERS WEST PENN LEAGUE

EIGHT-TEAM LOOP CLOSES ROSTER

By TOM BIRKS.

The roster of the West Penn Baseball League was closed last evening, when Honus Wagner accepted the forfeit of the Dormont club as the eighth member of the loop. And now that the loop is automatically closed, the schedule committee will work on the schedule so that everything will be in readiness for the umpire's cry of "play ball!" on May 5.

The managers composing the West Penn loop, which is the leading sandlot loop in Western Pennsylvania, had the final say regarding the last member, and all of the managers are tickled to death with the former County League club affiliating themselves with the go-ahead organization which Bill Fennell, Jack Fertig, George Vogt, Al Coons, Marshall McKeag, George Wageley and Hank Daly have worked hard to push ahead. Bill Fuchs was the spokesman for Dormont, and he feels that in helping the league Dormont has also helped the plans a large committee of Dormonters had formulated. Dormont is running under a new regime, and the community idea is going to be first and foremost in the season's plans of the South Hills officials.

NO PLAYERS SIGNED

Fuchs stated that nothing has been done as yet regarding the signing of players for the season, but one thing is sure, the day of the high payroll is of the past. Dormont will have a good club; it will have to, for some wonderful material has aligned itself with the West Penn.

All of the managers keenly welcomed the Dormonters into the loop, and the selection of the South Hills aggregation was unanimous. So now it can be said that the little band of six clubs starting the West Penn last season has branched out. The inclusion of Dormont and Homewood should augur good baseball for Universal, North Bessemer, Wilmerding and Whittaker.

Bunts

The East End Cardinals, under the sponsorship of Russ Fiala, will be back on the field with one of the strongest light fraternity teams in the city. They are members of the Steel City League. The Cardinals recently signed Johnny Hussey, former Westinghouse High School twirler. They would like to book a few games before the league season opens. For games call Hiland 8009-J.

The Wagner Minor League was successfully launched over the week-end. The following clubs will be in the loop: Meriouse A. C., Sarker Club, Fort Pitt, Jednota, C. F. Burkes and Shine A. C. The loop is for players 18 years of age and under. Any club in the district wishing to enroll under the Wagner banner in this particular class should call Homer Wagner at Grant 3045, or attend the next meeting at 213 Liberty avenue on Friday evening at 7:30.

The City League will hold its meeting tomorrow evening at the Books Shoe Store, Market street. President Harry Vere wants all the managers to be on hand. The umpire question is expected to be settled at this session, which has been called for 8 o'clock.

FAVORITES COP TOURNEY

Nine matches were played yesterday, and the contests will be resumed today in the junior A. M. A. A. U. handball championship tourney being staged at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. Favorites in each instance were victorious.

Three extra-game sessions were played, in which Lyn Warren, K. A. C., put out J. B. Reed, P. A. A.; C. C. Horner, K. A. C., tripped H. LeFevre, P. A. A., and L. Wolfe, Y. M. H. A., set down V. E. McGuinness, P. A. A. The first round summary:

WISE-CRACKERS ON CLUB

There's quite a few wise-crackers on the club, too. Some of them wuz askin me about the hundred berries and I gave them an argument. I was trying to tell them how I could beat the game and showed them I was out in front once. Joe Devine—he's a wise guy—he up and pops, "That's what Napoleon said when they got him on that Island." Well, of course, they all gives me the laugh on that one, and I will say that Joe pulled a real crack, but I'll be ridin' high yet.

The fellows had a show in Paso Robles. They wanted me to cut up a bit, but I'm glad I laid off, because it was a flop. I think I could have put it over with some of my stuff, but there's no use cryin' over skimmed milk.

Pie Traynor got off a good one that brought a laugh. One of the actors asked him, "Pie, when was you born?" and Pie comes back with "I first saw the light of day when I left Pittsburgh." That guy's good, too, but the show was so bad that even Pie couldn't save it.

BOUTS AT HOMEWOOD

The Homewood Progressive Club will stage an amateur show of seven bouts tonight in its club rooms, 7136 Hamilton avenue. Homewood boys will meet stars of the Willow, Clarion and Duke O'Hara clubs.

Boxing Comish Contributes to Hatch Fund

John L. Hernon, manager of Motor Square Garden, today received $50 from Frank Weiner, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission, as the commission's contribution to the benefit collection for the widow of Billy Hatch, Negro fighter, who died last week.

Strub, whom he outpointed in a decisive manner, there were only two highlights to the battle. The first came at the start of the fourth round, when Mellow leaped out of his shell to catch his opponent with a right and a left to the head in a neutral corner and force him to hold on momentarily, and the second in the form of a low punch by Mellow in the sixth round which caused Goodman to cease fighting and be assisted to his corner. Rather than claim the bout on a foul, Joey agreed to go on after a rest, which was given him, and he took the offensive again when they resumed boxing, with 45 seconds of the round remaining.

Goodman won every round of the battle, and carried off the unanimous decision. He scaled 137½ pounds against 137 for his opponent.

DURIS, SMACKEY DRAW

Mickey Duris, of Johnstown, bested Johnny Smackey, of Canonsburg, in the eight-round semi-final, the best contested bout of the night, but the judges disagreed and the referee, Joe Keally, ruled it a draw. Judge Jim McLaughlin voted for Smackey and Judge Frank Brown for Duris. Duris put up a pleasing two-handed punching exhibition, while Smackey concentrated on right-hand drives to the body. A good start and a hot finish by Duris should have clinched the honors for him. Both scaled 137 pounds.

Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, 145 pounds, outboxed Young Joe Walcott, Negro, of Washington, Pa., 146½, in the six-round second bout, and Georgie Bretsch, of the North Side, 149, knocked out Johnny Morgan, of Beaver Falls, Pa., 143, in the second round of the opener, a great punching battle on each side. Morgan took a count of nine and was counted out on a second trip to the floor as his seconds tossed in a towel.

A $3,000 crowd saw the show, and contributed $410 in a collection for the widow of Billy Hatch, Negro bantamweight, who died following a bout in McKeesport last Thursday night.

Red Robinson and Joe Keally alternated as referees, with Robinson handling the main and second bouts. Bill Schuster did the announcing and A. C. Couch and Max Zeugschmidt were the timers.

It was announced that Jackie Rodgers and Archie Bell will be the headliners next Monday night.

BRUINS MEET CANADIENS

BOSTON, April 1. — (AP.) — Montreal's colorful Canadiens clash with the Bruins here tonight in their quest for the Stanley cup, trophy symbolizing the hockey championship of the world, with nary a win from the Boston team during the regular playing season in their records.

The invaders have the momentum gained from vanquishing the New York Rangers in the play-offs of the divisional second and third place winners. Two out of three games will decide the series, with another Thursday night at Montreal and a third here Saturday if necessary.

Hard-bruising hockey in the play-offs for the challenge round took its toll from both teams. Injuries received against the Maroons put Dutch Gainor, star Bruins' forward, out of the game, and Howie Morenz, Canadiens' flash, is suffering from a bad charleyhorse.

Capt. Lionel Hitchman, of the Bruins, will play with headguard to protect a recently broken jaw and a badly slashed face sustained against the Maroons. Dr. Bill Carson will replace Gainor.

Sport Vignettes

Then there's the one about the two youngsters who grabbed a pair of scissors and cut big ragged chunks of hair from their heads and hid the hair behind the piano so their mother wouldn't notice what they had done . . . . Speaking of clinching a job in these parlous times, how about Stanislaus Zybszko putting a strangle-hold on that matchmaking assignment for the wrestling bouts in Madison Square Garden, New York? . . . . Old Stanislaus will be missed as an active performer in the game . . . . He was one of the most colorful and most businesslike of all the tumblers . . . . His last appearance here was at the Moose Temple in an effort made to revive the sport some months ago . . . . The promoter put the "Old Man" on in the first bout and topped the bill with new blood and names . . . . A handful of the curious turned out and most of them came late and were disappointed to learn that Zby had flopped his man in a few minutes and had donned his clothes and gone his way . . . . Short and broad of build, baldheaded and with virtually no neck, the elder Zbyszko was the ideal build of matman for toughness and durability . . . . And it was quite a sight to see him doing his stuff in his bare feet, calloused from tramping and hauling and mauling over mats in different towns almost every night . . . . Bob Waddell, Carnegie Tech's football coach, has his men in spring training . . . . The way to tell the difference between spring football training and the real stuff in the fall is by the absence of bear stories from the former . . . . There is no week-long siege of cripples who suddenly find a miraculous cure on Friday night that enables them to go into Saturday's game and trample the enemy's collective face in the mire for the honor and glory of dear old Alma Mater, a sweet girl . . . . Local boxing referees will have to count with the knockdown timekeeper or the new system now in effect will be a flop . . . . It often happens that the knockdown occurs on the far side of the ring from the knockdown timer and the boxer on the floor is so confused that he cannot pick up the count in the noise of the gavel banging on the floor and the excited hubbub of the fans at the moment . . . . And no one in the arena is more entitled to know the progress of the count than the man on the floor . . . . Nothing is in the bag in Sharon any more . . . . They've gone in for baskets exclusively since their high school team copped the state basketball title . . . . Barney Dreyfuss, just back from a vacation in Florida, is another one of the wise men of the world . . . . Although near the scene, he missed the Sharkey-Scott fight . . . . Luke Carney, the well-known second, is not a man to waste sympathy on a boxer during a bout . . . . He had Peaches Gallagher in there the other night and about midway in the battle Peaches let his handlers in on the big secret that he was tired . . . . "Tired are you?" barked Luke. "Tired, huh? Well, lemme tell you something—you certainly picked out a good time and a good place to get tired!"—HARRY KECK.

NATIONAL STARS TO PLAY AT ALLEGHENY

WOMEN'S GOLF EVENT CARDED JUNE 20-21

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Some of the foremost women golfers of the country are expected to compete at the Allegheny Country Club here again this June. Last year, it will be remembered little Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, disturbed an otherwise most peaceful tournament at Allegheny by turning that difficult course in 71, establishing a score that has taken its place as the lowest ever tallied by a member of the feminine sex.

PLAY JUNE 20-21

Allegheny's annual invitation tournament has been slated for Friday and Saturday, June 20 and 21, and it is anticipated the same high-class field will be represented. A number of the women who will play abroad on Glenna Collett's international team, against Great Britain next month, are likely to be back in the district long before the local tourney is played, in which event there is a good chance they will show their wares here.

Speaking of Allegheny, where the state championships have been decided in the past when played here, when the Pennsylvania Golf Association holds its annual meeting here this year in connection with the title competition, Greer McIlvain, of Longue Vue and Oakmont, will be elevated from the vice-presidency to the presidency and James A. Fownes, of Oakmont, will be installed as secretary. Spencer L. Jones, of Philadelphia, will be elected vice-president. The ticket for the board of directors includes J. Bernd Rose, of Allegheny, president-elect of the West Penn Golf Association; W. C. Fownes, Jr., of Oakmont, former U. S. G. A. prexy; Richard C. Long, Oakmont; John C. Dilworth, Fox Chapel; Max Marston, Philadelphia, and E. B. Leisenring, Philadelphia.

P. G. A. DATES SET

The sites and places for the Pennsylvania Golf Association's one-day medal play tournaments, conducted under its own handicapping system, have been set. They follow:

May 21—Pittsburgh Field Club and York Country Club.
June 23—Kahkwa Club, Erie.
June 25—Northampton Country Club, Easton.
July 29—Spring Haven Country Club, Wallingford, Pa.
July 30—Oakmont Country Club.
August 26—Old York Road Country Club, Philadelphia.
August 27—Greensburg Country Club.

If you'll send your three best scores for your home course for last season to the Pennsylvania Golf Association, 1101 Farmers' Bank Building, with a $1.00 bill attached, they'll send you an official handicap card.

Tee to Green

The Shannopin Country Club is making a few changes on its layout. The fourth green is being enlarged, extending out to the left. The thirteenth is to have a new approach, and the deep drop on the left of the green is being filled in. Trees to penalize the long hitter and make an easier second shot for the average player are being installed on this hole. An enlarged tee is under construction on the fourteenth hole.

Robert (Bob) Coyle, Charleroi theater manager, and prominent as a golfer at the Monongahela Country Club, entertained the Trinity Cathedral Royals in his beautiful talkie emporium last night shortly after they had defeated the Charleroi Ramblers on the basketball court. The boys were profuse in their thanks for his generosity.

Charley Manning, Shannopin's pro, has been ill with some sort of ear trouble. He's lost a lot of weight lately, but is reported improving.

Jimmy O'Donnell, Edgewood's pro, is reported down with the grip. Bill Hering, Smith, Edgewood's star sportsite hoofer, is right on the job. He's getting Tour Eagle to hold an open meeting to elect officers for the Slingerville Foursome—the only foursome that's a five-some in the district.

Billy Kane, Cambridge Springs pro, has been teaching at the P. A. A. since last season. It's his regular winter berth.

Joe Thomas and his locker-room crew, who were at Shanon Heights last year, may be found any old time of the day at the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Dr. Charles S. Cuden, of Thornburg, is exterminating a bigger and better season. If he gets those new clubs of his clicking.

Al Diebold, Jr. and Clarence (Buddy) Overend are getting set for the biggest season the Field Club ever knew.

Yes, sir . . . there's a boy in every golfer.

DUDLEY SETS PACE IN SOUTHEASTERN OPEN

ED SCORES 68; HORTON SMITH CARDS 75

FORREST-RICKER GOLF CLUB, AUGUSTA, Ga., April 1.—(INS.)—Smashing through the early starters of today's round with a 68 to equal the course record, Ed Dudley, veteran Wilmington (Del.) professional, assumed the lead in the $5,000 Southeastern open golf tournament.

The low card this morning gave Dudley a total of 220 for the 54 holes. He took a 75-77—152 in yesterday's play.

Horton Smith, Cragston-on-the-Hudson, New York, after playing the feature round of yesterday with Jones, followed close behind Dudley today and turned in a 75 for the morning round for a total card of 223, three strokes behind the leader.

COURSE RECORD

Dudley's 68 will be accepted as the official record for the course, club officials announced. This was decided because Dudley played from the back tees of each hole and was playing under competition. The former record was held by Ernest Ryals, club pro.

Dudley ran into trouble several times, but four birdies saved him. One under par on the 4, 5, 12 and 14 holes sent him three strokes ahead of Smith.

Out ..... 454-244-444—35

Smith found trouble on the third, ninth, tenth, twelfth and seventeenth holes. The young star was unable to get away from the traps.

Jones and his two noted partners started their quest before the largest gallery of the tournament. The tee was almost encircled while the fairways was lined and hundreds were perched upon the rolling hills marking the boundary lines.

Other early finishers were Francis Regan, 178-85-263; Wallace Lindquest, Macon, Ga., 174-82-256; J. C. Jackson, Atlanta, 172-84-256.

Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Hawthorn, N. J., the medalist in the qualifying round, was scheduled as the last to take the field with Miss Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, as her opponent.

Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, L. I., had no trouble disposing of Mrs. H. H. Baker, of Boston, in their match, winning 6 and 4, while Glenna Collett, of Providence, R. I., the national champion, trounced Mrs. John Arends, of Chicago, 7 and 6.

MISS ABERNETHY QUALIFIES

Maureen Orcutt, New York ..... 86-85—171

Mrs. H. H. Baker, Boston ..... 87-89—176
Helen Hicks, Hewlett, L. I. ..... 87-89—176
Peggy Wattles, Buffalo, N. Y. ..... 85-93—178
Edith Quinn, Brookline, Mass. ..... 89-89—178

Diamond was a dull spectacle both held frequently and led in alternate rounds up to the tenth, when Diamond flashed with a heavy two-fisted attack to the head. The score card gave Diamond five rounds, Perlick four and the first session was even.

JACKIE BRITTON LOSES

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 1.—(AP.)—Al Jackson, slugging blacksmith of Scranton, outslugged Jackie Britton, of this city, to gain the unanimous decision of the judges in a 10-round windup here last night. Jackson managed to get inside of Britton's guard in nearly every round. Jackson weighed 130 and Britton 126.

In another 10-round bout, Frankie Cawley, of Pittston, a member of Tommy Loughran's stable, easily won the decision in a slow bout with Leo Mitchell, of Los Angeles. Cawley weighed 186 and Mitchell 181.

SMITH STOPS RAYMOND

Hyatt All-America Floor Team Choice

"The past basketball season was just one big scoring spree," says Lee Gage in picking an all-America basketball team in the May issue of College Humor. "There were many great offensive machines, featuring a score of brilliant shooters. But there was a definite scarcity of stellar defensive players—especially in contrast to the large number of clever forwards and centers.

"This honor roll is not the result of my personal views alone but is based to a considerable degree upon advice tendered by prominent coaches in the countless athletic conferences throughout the country." Gage's choices follow.

FIRST TEAM.

Forward	Heal	Pittsburgh
Forward	F. Ward	Montana State
Center	Murphy	Loyola, Chicago
Guard	Wooden	Purdue
Guard	Johnson	N. Carolina State

lingen, Tex. The ride to Harlingen is a sleeper jump.

The contest at Tucson yesterday was played upon a nice ball ground, but the sportive field is located in the stretches of the vast desert and it so happened that the Pirates reached the town on a windy day. Throughout the game sand was wafted around the field, yet the play was good largely on account of a grass infield as well as a green outfield.

Chillysauce

Fred Brickell and Adam Comorosky are other members of the hospital squad. Neither was in uniform yesterday, but both appear to be on the mend. Brick and Comorosky are nursing sore legs.

The contest at Tucson developed a few comedy features. Hunter Hopgood fooled on good ball and were performing with the sore foot of Waltzing Matilda. Once when Ted raised Guerra out on strikes, the first catcher started after him with a ball Guerra pushed McGraw around the crowd, getting quite a thrill out of the bit of acting.

Manager Ens announces the following squad for the Beaumont camp tomorrow: Meine, Bednar, Swetonic, Erickson and Walter, pitchers; Hemsley and Root, catchers; Sohr, Grantham, Clarke, Eagan and Barkley, infielders; F. Wares, Comorosky, Mowell, Fingerhut and Frazier, outfielders.

C. & I. PLAYOFF SERIES OPENS

By JULIUS LEVIN.

The Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad passers and the Real Estate Savings and Trust quintet clash at the South Side Market House tonight in the first battle of a three-game series to settle the championship of the Commercial-Industrial League.

The railroaders captured the championship of the first half schedule, while the bankers took the laurels in the second half. The two clubs appear to be evenly matched and indications are that the series will go the limit before the championship is decided.

Pittsburgh and Lake Erie, winner of the laurels last season, had quite an easy time winning the crown during the first half of the season, but was forced to bow to the bankers in the closing half of the race.

Interest in the post-season affair of the Commercial-Industrial League is high and indications are that a large crowd will attend the inaugural tonight. Both teams have large followings of supporters and they will be out in full force to root for their favorites. Lee Carroll will be the referee in the opener.

Preceding the main attraction will be a preliminary game between the Tritans and Trimmers, two teams of youngsters from the basketball ranks of Trinity Cathedral. These boys, under the coaching of Vern Swartsfager, made a decided hit with the fans when they put on their act between halves of the recent American League battle between the Rosies and Peterson Crescents at Duquesne University.

The Duquesne Slovak Evangelical Union will be out to settle its three-game series with the Cleveland Local No. 138, when the teams clash in the second battle at Duquesne Saturday night. The Duquesne passers defeated the Ohioans in Cleveland last Saturday, 44-26.

The Duquesne Lafayettes captured their fourth consecutive County League championship last night by besting the J. J. Veronas, 32 to 25, in the deciding playoff game on the Duquesne High School floor. The victors trailed, 17 to 15, at half-time.

Sales and Service copped the Philadelphia Company League title by defeating Philadelphia Company, 27 to 21. In another tilt, Duquesne Light defeated Equitable Gas, 33-32.

The lineup:

LAFAYETTES	32	VERONAS	25
P. Minnick	F		Sefton
Whitehead	F		Hoffman
Wunderlich	C		Twyman
Gubby	G		Miller
A. Benedict	G		Demaree

Score by periods:

Lafayettes	8	15	22	32
Veronas	7	17	21	25

Substitutions: J. Minnick for Whitehead, O'Hara for Hoffman, Dwyer for Miller. Field goals: Wunderlich 4, Sefton 4, Benedict 3, J. Minnick 2, Hoffman 2, Gubby 2, Twyman. Foul: Lafayettes, 10 out of 15. P. Minnick, 2 out of 3, Benedict, 1 out of 1. P. Minnick, 4 out of 5, Whitehead, 1 out of 7, Gubby, 1 out of 1, Wunderlich, 1 out of 4, Veronas, 11 out of 19. Miller, 3 out of 5, Demaree, 5 out of 6, Dwyer, 1 out of 1, Twyman, 2 out of 3, Sefton, none out of 1. Referee—Leo Markey.

Fields Challenged By Young Corbett

CHICAGO, April 1.—(AP.)—The Illinois State Athletic Commission today had under consideration from Young Corbett III, sensational Fresno (Cal.) welterweight, demanding a title fight with Jackie Fields, world champion of the 147-pound division.

The challenge was backed by a $2,500 forfeit and was one of the items of business on the commission's regular meeting.

ROYALS TOP CHARLEROI

CHARLEROI, Pa., April 1.—The Tritts "Athletic" Royals with Bob Waite showing the way with a series of baskets, trimmed the Charleroi Buick Ramblers, 27 to 22, here last night. The Pittsburgh five led from the outset, although the Ramblers pressed during the closing minutes. Garvin, Scherr, Williams and Passinger also showed well, as did Ewens, Dunlap and Hugus, the last-named getting three two-pivers for Charleroi. The lineup:

Trinity—27.		Charleroi—22.
Passinger	F	Mundy
Scherr	F	Andrews
Williams	C	Saurich
Garvin	G	Derrycott
Waite	G	Lee

Substitutions—Dunlap, Ewens, Hugus, McCracken, Robinson, Reed. Field goals—Passinger, Scherr 2, Garvin 4, Waite 6, Mundy, Andrews 2, Saurich, Derrycott, Hugus 4. Foul goals—Trinity, 1 out of 4; Charleroi, 4 out of 10.

No. 2.

PETE O'HARA,
Westmoreland Country Club.

A record-breaker—that's Irish Pete O'Hara, pro at the Westmoreland Country Club. Pete has broken so many course records he can't remember 'em all. He holds Oakmont's low tally with Al Espinosa, a 68; he shot a 66 at St. Clair. His 70 at Bald Peak, N. H., and 74 at Hamstead, L. I., remain untouched.

O'Hara's golfing days started back in 1908. He came to the Pete O'Hara. Pittsburgh Field Club from Dublin, Ireland, in 1915, and has been professional at the White Beeches, N. Y.; Shackamaxon, N. J., and Brighton Woods, N. H., clubs. He copped the first New Jersey state title. Last year he qualified for the National Open at Winged Foot, led the local contingent and beat many of the star national golfers. Pete is noted for his deliberate style and is considered one of Western Pennsylvania's finest tournament player.

Grimes' Divorce Suit Is Postponed

CANTON, O., April 1.—(INS.)—The hearing in Common Pleas Court here of the divorce action filed by Burleigh Grimes, Pittsburgh National League pitcher, has been postponed. The hearing was to have been held today.

Grimes, who has not signed a contract with the Pirates for the coming season, charges his wife insisted on accompanying him to spring training camp in violation of rules and otherwise interfered with his profession.

Grimes has been training privately and hopes to join the Pirates before the season opens.

La Verne Fator

ONE probable development of the 1930 racing season is the attainment of the rarely reached goal of 1,000 victories by La Verne Fator, America's best jockey of the present day. Fator has ridden 958 winners out of 4,072 mounts in 11 years on the turf, a winning average of 23½ per cent. He needs only 42 more, therefore, to give him a total of 1,000, and on past form he bids fair to get that many for Harry F. Sinclair in 1930, as in only one year did he fall below 40. That was in 1920, when he rode 33 winners. Last year, his second poorest, he rode 55 winners. In his 11 years of riding for Sinclair's Rancocas Stable he has piloted many winners of the American turf classics and has brought home $2,210,929 in prize money.

TARTAN COACH SILENCED BY FRESHMAN

By JESS CARVER

Collegiate sport news today is as forlorn as a wet sheet draped over a fire plug, so it might be well to set forth a yarn or two which concern the kollech boys. About the only item of news value we have to offer is the information that Carnegie Tech started its spring football practice yesterday afternoon, a squad of some three score reporting to Head Coach Bob Waddell.

Speaking of Bob, did you ever hear the one that a freshman gridder pulled on him a year or two back? Its a pip. Here's how:

The frosh were scrimmaging against the varsity, and this particular Plebe was playing one of the tackles. The varsity was shooting plays both inside and outside of his territory, and the frosh was standing there as still as a statue, shifting neither to the right nor to the left.

THE RETORT TERRIBLE

"Heh, you!" shouted Waddell, "why the heck don't you move once in a while? You ought to try to stop those plays, at least. Move with 'em, fella! move with 'em!"

"Well, could YOU do it?"

"What could I say?" Bob will tell you. "He certainly had me stopped."

ONE ON PITT

The boys were being put through their paces when a stranger entered the enclosed practice field and entered into a conversation with Coach Jock Sutherland.

"Wonder who that guy is talking to Jock?" one of the players remarked, in the hearing of (so the story goes) Josh Williams.

"Oh, that is Howard Jones bringing back our plays so we can have a practice." Josh is reported to haye yodeled.

REFS DINE TONIGHT

The basketball referees will banquet at the Hotel Henry tonight. When Cal Bolster phoned to give me an invite, he said the boys had deliberated as to whether they should invite myself or Max Hannum, but had come to the conclusion that they'd risk having us both present.

"You know how it is," Cal apologized, "but no banquet ever benefited by having both you birds present. You eat too much."

The Tipoff

South, South Hills and Carnegie High Schools have filed their entries for the first annual Carnegie Tech Interscholastic Swimming Relays, carded for Saturday. The entry of these three schools assures a field of 25 for the meet, which promises a lot of splashes in any language.

Hugo Bezdek's crack that California had offered Carnera 10 grand to stamp out forest fires was the best offered by any one last week.

Jack Sutherland, of Pitt, and Lou Little, now of Columbia, and formerly of Georgetown, will address the annual banquet of the Penn State letternen at State College April 10. Jock will tell Scotch stories and Lou will vouch for 'em.

The proper way for a rookie baseballer to talk with his manager after having tried to swipe third base with the bases loaded is by telephone, according to our Carl Shatto.

After having gotten in only one day of spring football drill last week, due to the return of winter, Pete Henry and Bill Hamm are limping for evening more severe muscles among their Pesky athletes during the week now with us. The athletes' ideas on the matter hardly can be printed.

THE MILE RUN

Ray Conger, the Iowa State athlete, now running under the colors of the Illinois Athletic Club, has hopes of setting a new record in the mile run before he retires. I think Conger is a fine runner, but I am afraid that Nurmi's record of 4 minutes, 10 2-5 seconds will stand for some time.

Knute Rockne.

The first runner to run a mile approximating 4-12 was George, the old English professional, who made his mark some 50 years ago. This record was untouched until Taber, of Brown, broke it some 15 years ago. Joie Ray, Hahn, Conger, Lermond and Wide, the Swede, all have flirted with 4-12 since then, but that was the best they could do.

Taking off any time after one reaches 4-12 seems to be like taking off a leg. The only chap I have seen who seemed capable of touching the record was Larva, the Finn, who won the 1500-meter run at Amsterdam very impressively. He is just a youngster, and unless something unforseen happens, will be heard from in the Olympic games at Los Angeles, in 1932.

In the meanwhile, Nurmi's mark of 4 minutes, 10 2-5 seconds seems as unassailable as Gibralter.

GAGNON STOPS GRIFFITHS IN SIXTH

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—(AP.)—Jack Gagnon, French Canadian battler of Boston, scored a technical knockout over Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Ia., in the sixth round of the scheduled 10-round main event at the Arena last night. Each weighed 187½ pounds. It was one of the most sensational upsets of the fistic dope this season.

The Iowa boxer won the first two rounds, but, in the third, Gagnon dropped him with a right to the chin. Tuffy took a count of six, but immediately went down again, getting up without a count. The fourth and fifth rounds were fairly even.

They waded into a clinch in the sixth, after sending jarring rights to the body. Griffiths jabbed with two lefts, then Gagnon shot three rights to Tuffy's head. The last blow sent him to the floor. The referee started counting, but before reaching 10 he stopped and awarded the decision to Gagnon on a technical knockout, despite Griffith's protest that he wasn't knocked out and wanted to continue.

Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia heavyweight, visited Tuffy in his dressing room after the bout. "Don't mind that, Tuffy," said Tommy. "We all get it once in a while."

"I couldn't get started," Griffiths explained. "Gagnon nailed me early and I never got over it."

Walter Cobb, Baltimore, 222, won the decision over Bill Hartwell, Kansas City, 215, in the six-round semi-windup.

FAMOUS COACH TO TRANSFER TO DUKE

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., April 1.—(AP.)—Wallace Wade announced today he has resigned as head football coach at the University of Alabama and has signed a five-year contract with Duke University, beginning in September, 1931.

Coach Wade gave no reason for leaving Alabama. He said he had not planned to take any of his present assistants to Duke. Wade had been offered a five-year contract with Alabama, and had received offers from a number of other universities, two of them within the Southern Conference.

Dr. George H. Denny, president of the university, commenting on the coach's resignation, said:

Wade's contract expires with the 1930 season.

He came to the university in 1930 from Vanderbilt, where he served as assistant football, basketball and baseball coach. The next year his team won the Southern Conference championship, and repeated in 1924, 1925 and 1926.

ANNOUNCEMENT CONFIRMED

DURHAM, N. C., April 1.—(AP)—Announcement of Wallace Wade, football coach at the University of Alabama, that he had signed a five-year contract as head coach at Duke University was confirmed today by Dean William Wannamaker, of the local institution.

Wannamaker said James DeHart, former Pittsburgh star and present director of athletics, had not asked that his contract, which ends with 1930, be renewed.

He refused to say whether a contract had been tendered to DeHart.

Wannamaker would not disclose terms of the agreement reached with Wade nor reveal what, if any, additional changes in the coaching staff were contemplated.

Duke at present is coached by Jimmy DeHart, former University of Pittsburgh all-America quarterback. DeHart was the star of the great 1916 Pitt eleven, which went through the season undefeated. He coached at Washington and Lee prior to going to Duke.

Last fall DeHart's Duke eleven was crushed by the Pitt Panthers under a 52-6 score on the occasion of the dedication of the new Duke University stadium.

DUKE U. GRID PLAYER HURT

DURHAM, N. C., April 1.—(AP.)—Blaine Perry, 21, Duke University sophomore, was in Watts Hospital here today in an unconscious condition from an injury received in spring football practice yesterday.

Perry's home is at Bluefields, W. Va.

Just how he received his injury was unknown today. Coaches said he made no complaint that he had been injured during the practice, but as he left the field Head Coach James Dehart noticed that he appeared to be dazed. Dehart examined him and ordered his removal to the hospital where he lapsed into unconsciousness.

Physicians said his condition was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage.

Tilden Refuses To Play Coen In Final

CANNES, France, April 1.—(AP.)—Open criticism followed Bill Tilden and Wilbur Coen as they left for four days of exhibition tennis at San Remo and other resorts on the Italian Riviera. Considerable indignation was expressed at the refusal of the pair to go through with their scheduled final round tilt of the Cannes tournament. Tilden's official explanation, according to the referee, was that he did not care to play on account of his friendship for Coen.

DAILY TRUE STORY

'Paradise Enow'

ED BAXTER lighted his pipe, sat down beneath the big sugar maple, leaned up against the trunk and glanced off across Crescent Lake, where the sun-shot waves danced.

At noon he had eaten plentifully of the bass along with such other delicacies as his able sister knew how to prepare.

His sister, Mrs. Oliver, had brought her long-time friend up to camp with them. Emmy Thurber had been known to the Baxters since they were children.

Emmy was no flapper. She was too romantic to be a flapper. Neither was Emmy "on the shelf." She was 25 and wonderfully attractive in her quiet, romantic way.

Misunderstands

Emmy and Mrs. Oliver sat on the bench near the tree.

"You can't beat this, girls," he said. "This is paradise!"

"Feed a man," said Mrs. Oliver, who was a widow and knew, "and he begins to think of paradise."

Ed laughed comfortably.

"Paradise!" said Emmy Thurber.

"Pretty near," said Ed. "Now if you and me—"

"The very idea of likening this to paradise," Emmy said, hastily. Ed had such an uncomfortable habit of proposing to her right in the presence of his sister—and of proposing in a manner as though it were all understood that they would marry.

It was terrible.

Emmy wanted to marry, but she craved romance, great gobs of romance!

"What's the matter with this, Emmy?" Ed asked, settling back and watching a couple of bluejays, in the branches above him.

"Something Oriental, Ed," Emmy said; "something tropical, something romantic."

"Well, it's around ninety in the sun—that's tropical enough, and no place in the Orient can find scenery to compare with this!"

"This! As if it were to be compared to the drooping lacey palms," Emmy protested.

"Palms—and sand—and more sand—and dirty natives and a hundred and ten in the shade—little mud holes and no lakes or mountains—"

"Ed, you don't understand," Emmy protested. "Omar understood—you wouldn't know him."

"Why, no, I don't, Emmy. Now if you'd name the day—"

"Omar," Emmy stated hastily, "has put it in undying words." She rolled her eyes and quoted: "A book of verses underneath the bough,
A jug of wine, a loaf of bread—and thou
Beside me singing in the wilderness—
Oh, wilderness were paradise enow!"

Emmy Thurber sighed ecstatically and rolled her pretty hazel eyes.

"Well, the old boy didn't have Prohibition then—still I might scare up a jug of wine some place and get a loaf of bread, Emmy. You fetch along a book of verses, and I'll find a nice shady bough for us to sprawl under——"

"Ed Baxter!" Emmy cried in dismay. "You haven't any more romance than—than anything at all!"

"You hadn't ought to ease her, Ed," his sister admonished.

"Lordy, there's no harm in it, and it's time that Emmy quit that schoolgirl romantic stuff—time we got married."

"Emmy's queer. She'll be an awful fool if she doesn't marry you, Ed, but sometimes I think she doesn't know that you would be about the best husband in the world for her."

Emmy Lived Alone

Emmy Thurber's handsome old-fashioned home was on Maple street, in Woodridge, not a half dozen houses away from Ed Baxter's more modern one. Baxter was in real estate and in the bank and in so many other things that he came near to being the boy "Poo-Bah" of the town.

Emmy Thurber lived alone, save for an ancient relative to whom Emmy gave a home and a couple servants. Emmy wouldn't sell any of the furnishings for worlds. Reliable antique dealers had offered her tempting prices. Emmy didn't need the money and couldn't part with the furniture, any more than she would part with the old jewels that her great-grandmother Thurber had left her.

It was claimed that some of those jewels dated back three and four hundred years and had been in the loot of pirates overcome by old Captain Thurber.

At any rate, Emmy wouldn't sell them and she planned to leave them for a certain museum.

Woodridge had its summer colony. There were three noted summer hotels, golf links, big Lake Johns and other attractions.

Emmy belonged to the select local golf club and used to play now and then to keep fit.

It was at the club that Emmy became acquainted with Laurence Lawrence. He was tall, slim, had the curly gold hair of an Olympian god and such dreamy eyes!

More than that, Laurence Lawrence could spout poetry by the yard.

Emmy had him over to tea several times along with other congenial friends. Once she had Laurence Lawrence over for dinner and Ed Baxter and Mrs. Oliver were there.

Ed jawed all the way down the street to his sister about Emmy losing her head over such a sap.

A little later Mrs. Oliver said to her brother, "I'm worried about Emmy—she seems to have lost her head over that Laurence Lawrence. As far as I can see, he's nobody at all except a poetry-quoting dude although Emmy showed me two books he wrote."

"Books—what were they?"

"Poetry," Mrs. Oliver, being practical and with a sense of humor, paused to laugh. "One book was called 'Years of Yearnings.' I saw the book—good enough poetry for anyone who likes it. I wish Emmy would get some sense and marry you. Don't let her make a fool of herself, Ed."

Begins Investigation

"No use if Emmy doesn't want me—I always thought she did," Ed answered.

"If I was a man and wanted a girl I would fight to get her," his sister declared.

The next day Ed added to his customary duties those of investigator. He took a run into the big city and came back on an evening train.

He called to see Emmy, but she told him she was sorry, she was entertaining some literary guests with Laurence Lawrence.

"I'd like to see him," said Ed.

"Ed Baxter, don't you dare get jealous and make trouble for me. Mr. Laurence Lawrence is a perfectly lovely man," said Emmy.

"Good night, Emmy," said Ed.

But he didn't go home. He listened to the chatter from the darkness of the honeysuckle bower, silently cursing the mosquitoes.

He heard the guests leave. He heard Emmy tell Mr. Laurence Lawrence that he, too, might go, as it would make talk if he remained.

"Tomorrow, then, my dear little girl, we shall go over Omar together," said Laurence Lawrence.

Baxter Delayed

A lot of things delayed Ed Baxter the next afternoon, and it was around three when he came up the back street and cut across to the Thurber plot with its high wall and grape arbors and shrubs.

Emmy was seated on a cushion. There was a silver plate full of fancy cakes and, to Ed's amazement, the old cut glass decanter containing what seemed to be wine.

Laurence Lawrence was reading Omar to her.

"It makes it all so real, dearest," he said, "when we partake of the so-called bread and have a sup of wine."

"Doesn't it!" agreed Emmy. She seemed rather stupid and Ed guessed that she had too much wine.

She drank at the urgings of Laurence Lawrence. He droned on, reading, and Emmy went beautifully to sleep.

"One side, you sap. I'll drill you!" he said and all the velvet was gone from his voice.

Ed Baxter socked the man right where his hand held the gun. There was a muffled explosion. Lawrence tried to run but Baxter grabbed him, yanked him inside, called a doctor.

When Emmy came out from under the effects of the doped wine she said the usual thing—"What—where?"

Emmy Cries

"Mr. Laurence Lawrence, whose real name is 'Dude' Muggs, is locked up. Your jewels are over at police headquarters. They were in his pocket, Emmy," said Ed.

Emmy started to cry. Mrs. Oliver quieted her.

"Let's go over to my camp and read Omar," Ed suggested.

"Ed," said Emmy, "if you'll marry me tomorrow, all nice and quietly, I'll go to camp with you, but if you ever mention Omar, or romance, or—or anything I'll——" she paused and shuddered.

And so they were married.

Ed had found out that the real Laurence Lawrence had been dead some ten years, and had smelled a large rat. Emmy said he was awfully smart to do that.

When they got to camp, and Mrs. Oliver discreetly remained home this time, Emmy Baxter—she that was Emma Thurber—sat beside Ed and stared off across the moonlit lake.

"Oh, Ed," she said, "this is—is—"

"Paradise enow?" he asked.

"Yes," she said, "yes——"

She would have said "yes" three times only Ed was kissing her.

Tea room proprietors in Chicago complain that hoodlums patronize their establishments and drive away the nice trade.

It must be terrible—gangsters making whoopee in tea roooms! Whispering and giggling!

At that—many innocent people will probably be killed in Chicago tea rooms. But it will be by accident—stabbed by bozos who wave their forks.

Some mild mannered person will innocently ask a tea room waitress to bring him a pineapple—and the racketeers will clear out and never go near the place again.

MARCH OF PROGRESS

Working with an ordinary magic lantern, Professor Quigsby Doakes has perfected a system of rejuvenation for ladies. "I project pictures upside down on a screen," explains Doakes, "thus causing spectators to stand on their heads to view the pictures. The blood promptly rushes to the head, thus restoring the schoolgirl complexion."

In this timid age, when people seem afraid to come right out and say what they think, it is refreshing to discover an outspoken, straight-from-the-shoulder man!

Such a man is the correspondent in St. Phillips, North Carolina, who writes for the Newberry Herald News. He hammers home the following point:

On Tuesday night, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Gallman and little son, Deile, Miss Lottie Lee Halfacre, Mr. John David Setzler and I met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Halfacre. We played one of the old time games—thimble. When one would miss in calling the right one's name who had the thimble we would make them pay a fine. Then the fun came when selling the pounds. Mr. F. A. Gallman sold them over G. H. Ruff's head. Why shouldn't young people get together and make the hours of night more pleasant than what they do? Let us always look forward to that which is bright and happy and it will prolong our lives and make us more cheerful.

We get many requests, in the mail, to boost things. But if the idea does not appeal to us, we simply tear the letter into bits and think nothing further about the matter. However, the idea suggested by a Mr. Milt Basham, and illustrated above, appeals to us. He wants to manufacture and place on the market a new pocket flashlight for hot, sunny days. A limited amount of stock is offered to the public. If interested, communicate with Mr. Basham, in care of the Non-Conducting Battery Corporation, 1308 East Seventh street.

Census About to Begin True Answers Required

Wednesday morning an army of census enumerators, under the direction of James E. Routley, A. D. Levy and Dr. George L. Metzger, supervisors, will begin making a census of Allegheny County as part of the fifteenth decennial enumeration undertaken by the government of the United States. Eventually an enumerator will visit your home, whether it be a city or rural dwelling, and will have quite a few personal questions to ask. You mustn't be annoyed—the enumerator has to ask them and you have to answer truthfully, under penalty.

It is not for purposes of gossip that the government wants to know something about your private affairs and you do not need to be afraid that the enumerator is going to the next house and repeat any secrets you may have told. Although the humorously inclined may see something funny in some of the questions—for instance, what is your color or race? when your color quite likely is most obvious—the purpose behind the census is a serious one.

That is, it is a national taking of stock, an inventory of ourselves to inform ourselves how we are increasing in numbers, in what parts of our country the increase is greatest, how we are doing in the matter of thrift, as indicated in home ownership, etc.

The census, like any inventory, is a good thing. Besides keeping statisticians busy for a long time summarizing the facts about ourselves, it gives the resident of any city which shows growth in population a glow of personal pride and gives basis for the renewal of the ancient boast of being a citizen of "no mean city."

Terminal Traffic Plans To Be Studied Shortly

Some time this week Council and Mayor Kline are expected to get around to consideration of the plans for caring for traffic in relation to street changes contemplated with the erection of the proposed $20,000,000 passenger terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Penn avenue. They involve Penn avenue, Eleventh and Grant streets and are known as "Plan Z," providing for grade separation, and "Plan T," providing for a traffic circle at grade. Both were submitted by a special committee appointed to make a study of the problem, "Plan Z" being the recommendation of the majority of the committee.

The railroad has intimated that delay in deciding this matter is holding it back in its preparations for the proposed terminal, since treatment of the site will be affected and the company must know in advance as to which it must make provision for.

Since this is a big undertaking, and will mean much in the way of employment, it is clear that an early decision will mean a great impetus to the demand for labor. The obstacle appears to have been the difference in cost of the plans, the railroad officials being willing to accept either, but being opposed to assuming the excess of the cost of "Plan Z," claimed to be much the better, over the expense of constructing "Plan T."

A Big Cow

They Say This Was Her Rib.

PROFESSOR OSBORNE, TELL US WHAT THIS IS?

The Stanion Church, in Northants, England, possesses this bone and is proud of it, as are all the inhabitants. Nobody knows how long this great bone has been in the church. The man in charge is glad to show it to you. You can give him something or not as you choose.

We request Prof. Osborne, of the American Museum of Natural History, to give this bone what is scientifically called "the once over" and tell us for the benefit of those Britishers just what it is.

Did it once belong to a dinosaur? Was it cast up on the British beach when some whale died and went to pieces?

Could it have been a tusk in the mouth of a mammoth?

Not enough curve to it for that. And mammoth tusks don't have such roots.

WHAT WAS IT?

The oldest inhabitant of Northants will tell you what it was. He and thousands of others believe it to be the one rib of a famous gigantic cow of the old days.

The cow was so big and powerful that it supplied the entire village with milk.

And the cow wished it to be known that there was nothing that she could not fill with good sweet milk.

One day an old witch came with a sieve and said, "Fill that." The cow couldn't do it and died of a broken heart.

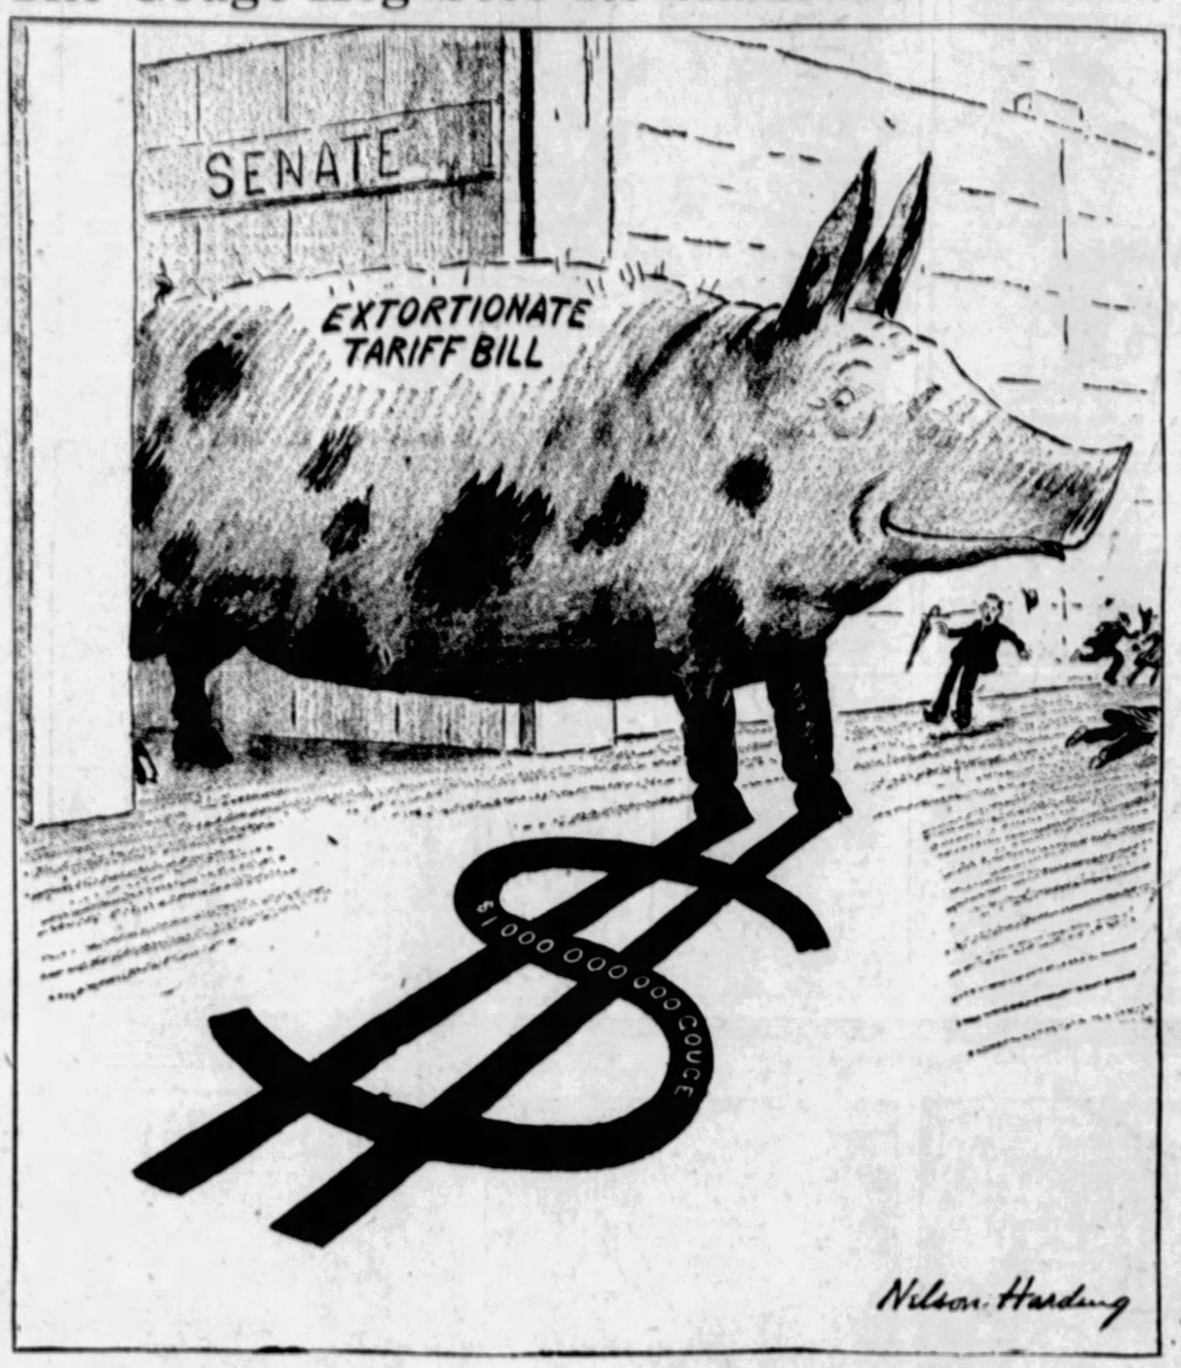
When they happen to be part of a strange religion like the Mohammedan religion and you deny them, you get into trouble.

When they only affect the gigantic cow and a witch with a sieve, you can believe or not as you please, safely.

The Gouge-Hog Sees Its Shadow -:-

Drawn by Nelson Harding



This hog, as we too plainly see,
Is not the "ground" variety,
The timid species that so fears
Its shadow that it disappears.

Emerging from the door behind,
This hog comes out—the brazen kind—
That seems to say, "That dollar sign
Is one grand shadow, and it's MINE!"

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Knuckle Golf

WE must disagree with some of the oldtime marble champions on the nomenclature of that boyhood industry.

"Bugs" Baer

There was no uniform classification of rolling stock. Names differed all over the country.

We go all the way back to 1890 in Philadelphia when a Quaker City Liliputian could have whipped the state militia of Kentucky.

There were sharpshooters in those days and all pegging was for keeps.

The game of marbles was known as nurdles. A nurdle was also a common. Commons were cheap marbles and could be bought 10 for a cent.

Covered with gaudy red, green or purple paint, nurdles could be purchased five for a cent. They were made of clay and were easily pulverized when smacked with a tommy troller.

A tommy troller was a huge nurdle over an inch in diameter. The finest ones were made of stone. But a clay tommy troller could be purchased for a cent.

Tommy trollers were legislated out of our neighborhood because sharpshooters like Spidge Trumbore and Chalker Brown made the game too expensive. In one season they smashed all the nurdles in Pennsylvania.

We never saw an agate made of real agate. The agates were stone and glass.

The finest marble in any boy's armory was the tommy troller. It was a weapon of attack. Next came the moonies, the milkies and the cat's eyes.

We see few of the kids playing pots any more. This was knuckle golf. Nor do we hear the old expressions.

The loudest cry of the spring tournaments was "fen." It was utilized to prevent inchings and hoistings.

Hoisting was elevating the fist from the ground to get a better sweep with the agate. Inching was stealing territory while spanning from a pot. A span was the sweep of the hand on the ground from the thumb to the tip of the little finger.

The best hoister we remember was Soss Naylor. The finest incher-up was Yallerbelly Winterknight, who had a double-jointed thumb.

Tommy trollers were never used on the ground. You took your first standing-up whack with them and then substituted a moonie or a milkie.

THE DARK HORSE

By Herbert Kaufman

THE country was quite sure that E. H. Harriman's passing closed a most distinctive chapter of American railroading.

Smug statistics and cocksure opinion ridiculed the notion that any more poor parsons' sons or prairie station agents could capture a transcontinental line or found new dynasties.

The time supposedly had forever gone when bold young knights might whittle home-made lances, and successfully enter the lists against the Grand Seigneurs of industry and finance.

IF you had then pointed to a pair of stripling real estate men, recently recalled as barefoot newsboys in a jerkwater Ohio town, and predicted that they would soon turn the profits of an obscure suburban development into a network of steel rails, and lay them from coast to coast before either reached fifty—probability itself would have rocked with laughter.

But that's PRECISELY what the Van Sweringens have DONE.

Dark horses are always upsetting the odds in that way. The long shot DOES occasionally win, as the last English Sweepstakes has just informed us.

The under-estimated colt regularly confounds expert judgment and OUTRUNS the field.

Sorehead belief that champions and ladder-toppers are born of LUCK and HAPPENSTANCE may console BAFFLED VANITY, but it merely amuses the facts of the case.

The more one investigates the skyline title of these suddenly apparent leaders, the more valid he finds their position.

SCHOOLROOMS don't remember them as glib and showy pupils.

Few of them were ever class stars. Most of 'em were like Sam Blank, whose election to the presidency of the X Steel Company is a never-ending source of wonderment to his old town neighbors.

Ability, they opined, must be mighty scarce when a dub like that is placed in control of a corporation. YOU could put it all over Sam thenadays. He had to dig all night to grasp subjects YOU snatched in a quick mental swoop.

But that very deliberation EXPLAINS him; compulsion made him patient, painstaking and plodding. It was the early realization that he MUST devote more time and labor than the average to GET his AVERAGE, that molded the habit of PERTINACITY which now HALLMARKS his reputation.

While you were SKIMMING the surface of event and duties, he was plowing along and leaving a furrowed trail behind him.

Because he couldn't catch information from inspiration, he had to work by rule—and he kept learning rules until today he knows the stuff out of which they're made.

HE rose by earned promotion. He's a good general because experience laboriously acquainted him with the typical difficulties that beset every subordinate under his command.

You were so clever that it made you overconfident. You started out with an advantage, but you confided your hopes to disorderly talent instead of discipline effort.

You're superficial—a prattler, a dabbler and a scatter-brain. You shoot fast, but you hit all over the target, while marksmen, with a definite aim in life, slowly and steadily bang the bell.

You know little of many things, but you don't know all of anything. And it's the man who concentrates his intelligence on some one thing, until he knows his specialty better than competition and opposition, that graduates into a Sam Blank or a Van Sweringen.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD ∴

By Elsie Robinson

"REMOVE that film!" You've seen that slogan dozens of times in the ads., haven't you? Mighty good slogan for teeth. An even better slogan for lives.

Lives grow dingy as well as teeth, with a slow, unconscious accumulation. Accumulation of what? Self. Egotism.

Take your life, for example. Perhaps you don't know that you have acquired a film. But you have. We all have. Once upon a time, when you were a youngster, you didn't have it. You thought about yourself, of course. But you could look at life with fresh, unprejudiced eyes. Eyes that saw more than yourself. Eyes that didn't discolor every experience with personal prejudice and conceit, but took in all the sights, generously, without question. Some of the sights were good. Some were bad. But they all made up a big show. A dazzling, sparkling show—and what a Bing Bang you got out of it all!

Then suddenly things began to lose their sparkle. You didn't know why. Things didn't excite you or amuse you or pep you up as they had. Instead, they bored you or got your goat. You thought the world must be changing. But the world hadn't changed. You'd changed.

You'd acquired that film—that film of egotism that made you see everything through a dingy, hard haze of self. You no longer saw the adventure in things . . . the novelty in things. Instead, you saw your self in things. You saw your own comfort or discomfort, your own prejudices or desires or hates or loves or resentment or rebellion in every experience. You had become like the man who looks through smoked glasses. The man with smoked glasses doesn't see the world as it is. He doesn't see the exquisite diversity of nature, the changing lights and shadows, the vivid loveliness and newness of red and blue, violet and green and orange. He just sees a tiresome smokiness that dulls everything. And you, looking through that film you've acquired, see only dull, tiresome reflection of your own ideas and feelings in every experience. No wonder life has lost its tang and sparkle. No wonder you're bored.

Remove that film!

Start in today to accept life as it is and people as they are. Stop testing everything by your standards. Many of the most interesting things in life don't fit your standards at all. Stop judging everyone by your reactions. Many of the most important people would yell for the doctor if they found themselves having your reactions.

Text For Today Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.—Matthew xx:27, 28.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

IN THE late Pliocene (V D3) the horse-stock invaded South America, and here was evolved the hippidium branch, possessing extremely short legs and a strangely constructed nose-region.

These creatures were a group of three genera, of which only four species have as yet been unearthed, only extinguished within the last million years.

H. G. Wells.

Their short legs probably indicate that they were adapted to mountain life. The origin of this aberrant line is traceable from Protohippus, a group of thirteen somewhat earlier species.

The fourth and largest sideline is the Mipparion branch. It came off from Merychippus in the late Miocene and ran on to the close of the Pliocene, when it was extinguished, but not before it had given rise to some thirty-five species.

It is interesting as retaining the two outer toes, though not touching the ground, long after the main line had reduced them to splints; while, on the other hand, some of its species improved their teeth beyond anything known even in present-day horses, the grinding pattern being more complex in some, the height of the teeth greater in others. It is likely that this increased specialization of teeth was an adaptation to a desert life, where the hard, dry vegetation needs more grinding.

It may be that these horses fell out of the battle for life because of this too exclusive dependence on the special virtues of their teeth and were caught by a change of circumstances that made speed of greater importance.

That is a condensed summary of the story of the horse and its ancestors and vanished cousins as we know it today. It is a tale of adventure and arduous conquest, of steady and successful adaptation of a race to new surroundings. But it is more interesting as a part of a vaster drama.

It displays one streak of the process of evolution very completely and convincingly. Step by step, variety by variety, the progressive changes can be traced. One can hardly say where one species ends and another begins.

Doubtless our knowledge of fossil horses will be further filled in and rounded off in the future, as new specimens turn up; but new discoveries can do no more now than fill in a little gap here, correct a minor error there. The essential facts are already before us in their fullness. In one long gallery one might assemble all these stages.

We have here in a crushing multitude of steadily progressing specimens just that complete, continuous exhibition of Evolution in action the Creationist has demanded. He is answered.

Sec. 4. The Continuity of Evolution as Shown by the Sea-Urchins.

ONE great merit of the horse's evolutionary record is that the animal is familiar and that we can readily understand the biological meaning of the main trends in its long, ancestral development. Its only defect as a demonstration is that the record is nowhere continuous in one single locality.

If we could find a considerable thickness of rock, all deposited under approximately the same conditions, we should expect to find an absolutely unbroken sequence, a still more unbreakable evolutionary chain, in the fossils which it contains.

Such large thicknesses of one kind of deposit are naturally, though unfortunately, rare; for usually, as deposits pile up they are brought nearer to the surface of the sea by the mainland rising, or by their own gradual accumulation, or they are submerged deeper by the land's sinking.

In either case the character of the sediment and therefore of the animals which can live at the bottom, will change, since, for instance, sand particles will sink before fine mud, and future sandstorms therefore be laid down nearer inshore and in less quiet waters than future clays.

But the chalk of the Mesozoic Epoch (IV) happily serves our purpose. Up to a thousand feet of it were continuously laid down in large but shallow seas, originally as a limy mud, largely formed of the tiny skeletons of single-celled animals, rained softly down from the waters above.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 1.—The latest in the glowing decadence of Manhattan's fast living crowd is the "pass out" party. It was reported held in a private home in the East 50's and each guest was supposed to imbibe enough cocktails to be rendered completely blotto. And each did.

While such a debauch is a little unusual, it is significant of the mad morals of the day. And there is no denying hard drinking in New York is confined largely these days to mothers and daughters—women who have nothing to do but gad.

They are the determined seekers after the mythical new wallop in life. Their riotous days begin with pre-luncheon cocktails and on through the afternoon highballs to the blurry evening which usually ends in greeting dawn with a hiccup in the Harlem dives.

Any number of these women in the past two years have progressed rapidly from the stimulation of alcohol to the more dangerous deliriants—morphia and cocaine. Reports that quite a number carry hypodermic outfits in vanity cases are not exaggeration.

Recently I have had four women of some social standing pointed out as new recruits to the vast gray army of drug addicts. Their eyes had the acetylene glare and there were all the familiar twitchings of those who are "on the stuff."

The most disheveled revelers today are not found in the squalor of the Bowery or along water fronts. They may be seen lurching from limousines in the early morning along the aristocratic areas of the upper East and the upper West sides.

The rich and leisurely in their wild fling are setting a new pace but on the other hand the so called great middle class is going in for stern sobriety. The family beer parlors and cafe speak-easies once patronized by them are almost deserted.

The biggest theatrical offer up to date was that to Col. Charles Lindbergh six weeks after his flight to Paris. The whopper is reported at $20,000 a week for 10 weeks for the Lone Eagle to appear in a play especially written for him. He turned it down in an hour after it was presented.

Blanche Ring, as gay as ever, is disporting in Edgar Selwyn's hit, "Strike Up the Band." Like a babbling brook, she is cooling and refreshing, skipping and trilling as she did 20 years ago. And the songs she popularized, "Bedelia," "Waltz Me Around Again Willie," and, of course, "Rings on My Fingers" have few equals today.

A flip talking flapper, caught in a recent cafe holdup, tried to smart crack with one of the invading gorillas.

"Yeah," was the reply. "Have you a friend?"

The hands of an electric clock on my desk, for no reason at all, this morning began suddenly to fly around madly. And a visitor who saw it—Irving Cobb, no less—was under sufficient control to refrain from observing how time flies.

When I go sight seeing with country cousins I have found one place all invariably want to see and that is the Church of the Transfiguration—the Little Church Around the Corner. One of the impressive features is the sprinkling of old shoes and rice on the sidewalk, symbolizing the innumerable marriages held there at all hours of the day.

The Little Church in the purplish gloom of late evening with its ivy clad walls and tiny yard somehow immediately inspires meditation. Pedestrians pass by and seem lost in reverie for several blocks.

"There was a report you dropped off in our town today," postcards Miss E. P., of Charleston, W. Va.

We hope the mistake was discovered in time to avert a panic.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

YOU wonder at times how it is that certain couples you know take their vacation trip singly instead of going together.

You should think it might make trouble, but you know that you have been on trips with your wife (or with your husband) which you did not enjoy very much because of the differences in your interests.

One or the other would have had a better time if more time had been spent here or there, as the case might be.

It is a pretty good plan to follow, that of being willing to let your life partner take a trip alone occasionally, with the privilege of doing as he or she personally desires.

Perhaps you are fortunate in having a family united as to what shall be done, where and how for the summer vacation.

But even so, it is a good thing for those who spend their lives together to get away now and again and be able to bring home fresh viewpoints each to the others.

But if this cannot be done under a plan that is agreeable to all concerned, it mars what might otherwise be a restful, relaxing adventure.

Isn't it interesting to be able to take home new stories and aren't you just as eager to know what the others did to have a good time?
